U.N. Arranges Limited Cease-Fire On Cyprus

Turkey Stages Land, Sea, Air Invasion

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

United Nations forces on embattled Cyprus today arranged a limited cease-fire in Nicosia on the line dividing the Greek and Turkish communities, but Greek Cypriots fought outside the capital against a Turkish land, sea, and air invasion.

A British armed forces radio broadcast in Nicosia, monitored in Tel Aviv, said the cease-fire would be temporary and not long enough "to enable evacuation from Nicosia or any other area tonight."

It did not say when the ceasefire was over.

Greece ordered a general mobilization of its armed forces and rushed troops to the Turkish border.

Turkish land, sea and air forces struck at dawn in a twopronged attack, storming ashore the island republic in the north near the port city of Kyrenia and at Limassol in the south.

A little more than seven hours after the invasion began, the Turkish government in Ankara announced that the city of Nicosia had fallen to the invading army. There was no immediate confirmation from correspondents in Nicosia.

Neither side released casualty figures and there were conflicting reports of surrender on each side.

UPI Correspondent Wilborn Hampton reported from Nicosia that bitter fighting erupted on the Nicosia-Kyrenia Road, a twisted highway that runs about 18 miles from the sea to the capital.

Turkish paratroops landed 10 miles inland near Nicosia and fanned out over the mountainous countryside between the capital and the northern coast. Heavy fighting was reported in the region.

Turkish warplanes roared over Nicosia and bombed the headquarters of the Greek-led Cypriot national guard and the police headquarters on the outskirts of the capital.

The Greek Cypriots sent tanks and armored cars streaming north to fight the Turkish invaders. The Greek Cypriot radio said four Turkish warplanes had been shot down.

A Greek Cypriot radio report said a Greek army contingent of 950 men on Cyprus had joined the battle against the Turks.

A pall of smoke hung over the so-called "green line" in central Nicosia, the dividing point between the Greek and Turkish communities. Explosions and gunfire boomed through the city.

A United Nations spokesman in Nicosia said the U.N. peacekeeping force on the island had made two proposals for a cease-fire, but that the Greek commander of the Cypriot national guard had turned them down.

The spokesman said Turkish troops were advancing on the capital in a pincer movement.

Fighting was also reported in Limassol, the island's second largest city, and other centers.

The invasion came five days after national guard troops overthrew the government of Archbishop Makarios on the island republic, which has a population of 80 per cent ethnic Greeks and 20 per cent Turkish Cypriots.

Turkey said the attack was launched after diplomacy failed to solve a crisis touched off by the Greek-led coup. "We are going to Cyprus not to make war but to restore peace," Premier Bulent Ecevit told newsmen in Anakara early today.

In Athens, the Greek cabinet met in emergency session and ordered a general mobilization of the armed forces. A communique charged the invasion was illegal.

Greek soldiers and tanks were reported moving toward the border with Turkey.

In Washington, the Pentagon announced a naval task force led by the aircraft carrier USS Forrestal was steaming toward Cyprus to aid in the possible evacuation of American citizens on the island.

In San Clemente, Calif., President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger conferred by telephone throughout the night on the crisis.

The State Department, in a statement relayed by the Western White House, said "We regret this military action by

Doar's Report On President Being Weighed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Judiciary Committee, its fact-finding over, today began weighing the evidence to see if it justifies impeaching President Nixon for the Watergate cover-up, contempt of Congress, tax fraud and abuse of his office.

Four proposed impeachment articles were laid before the 38-member committee yesterday by Special Counsel John Doar, who reportedly told the panel that "reasonable men acting reasonably would find the President guilty" of impeachable offenses.

Today, the committee met privately again to hear Doar go over the evidence he believes supports each of the proposed articles. Sam Garrison, the deputy Republican counsel, will present counter arguments on Monday and the committee will begin its debate and vote later in the week.

A decision was to be made Monday whether to broadcast the final committee deliberations live.

Committee members were startled today by the disclosure of a major discrepancy in a final bit of evidence submitted Thursday by Nixon's chief defense counsel, James D. St. Clair.

The evidence, a brief excerpt from a Presidential tape, was submitted to show that Nixon did not approve "hush money" payments to the Watergate burglars on March 21, 1973. St. Clair said the tape was of a March 22 meeting between Nixon and his then chief of staff, H. R. Haldeman.

But there were references in the tape to events that did not occur until March 23 — indicating the tape could not possibly have been made on March 22 as St. Clair claimed.

"If it was wilful, it was a very serious matter," said Hamilton Fish, Jr., R-N. Y., of St. Clair's submission. "In the meantime, you've got to give the benefit of the doubt to stupidity."

Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif., said it was typical of the "deception, cover-up, alterations and lies" that have marked White House relations with the committee from the start.

Doar's belief that the evidence supports Nixon's impeachment on the grounds drafted by the committee staff was endorsed by the panel's chief Republican counsel, Albert Jenner.

Four alternate packages of impeachment articles — drafted by Democratic members — were also laid before the committee. These all included Doar's points and added others such the milk and ITT cases, the firing of former Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and the secret bombing of Cambodia.

The staff's first proposed article of impeachment dealt with the 1972 break-in at Democratic headquarters at the Watergate. It flatly declared that:

"Begining almost immediately after the burglary, and continuing up to the present time, Richard M. Nixon, using the powers of his high office, acting directly and personally and U.S. To Take Resolution Before U.N.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — State Department officials said the United States would introduce a resolution in the U.N. Security Council today calling for a cease-fire in Cyprus.

Department spokesman Robert Anderson told reporters the resolution, to be co-sponsored by at least Britain and France, also would call for all parties involved in the Cyprus matter to meet in London for negotiations to end the conflict.

Anderson said, "our objectives in this situation are to seek a return to the constitutional regime in Cyprus, to obtain a cease-fire, and to urge the parties to proceed to London to negotiate as requested by the United Kingdom."

He said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger had been in contact Saturday with the foreign ministers of Britain, France and Germany.

Anderson said he was not certain which nations beside France and Britain would join the U.S. resolution.

He said Kissinger was expected to return to Washington late Saturday night from San Clemente, Calif., where he has been conferring with President Nixon.

Kissinger, department spokesmen said, is deeply concerned that the Turkish invasion of Cyprus could precipitate war with Greece, lead to a disintegration of NATO's southern flank, and possible threaten detente with Moscow.

Auto Crash Fatal To Football Star

Jeffrey Scott Duncan, former San Rafael High School football and track star, died yesterday in a Reno hospital following an auto accident. He was 20.

Duncan lettered three years in football and four years in track at San Rafael High, from which he graduated in 1972.

He was named three times to the All-Marin County Athletic League football team and was selected in his senior year to play in the North-South Shrine All-Star Football Game at Los Angeles Coliseum.

San Rafael coach Bob Muster said that Duncan "was a super athlete. He was one of those kids who come around maybe once or twice in your coaching lifetime."

In his freshman year at the University of California at Berkeley, Duncan led the junior varsity in rushing yardage. As a sophomore last year he won his varsity letter playing occasionally as running back and as a regular member of the kick return unit.

Duncan was a native of San Jose. He came to San Rafael with his family in 1968.

He had been working for the summer as a lifeguard at King's Castle at Incline Village, Nev. He was fatally injured in a single car crash Thursday night.

Reinecke Receives Denial For Mistrial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Judge Barrington Parker today denied mistrial motions sought by lawyers for California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke and ruled out calling nine witnesses for Reinecke's defense against charges he lied to a Senate committee. (See another story, page 5.)

Parker said he would rule on a companion motion to dismiss the charges when the trial resumes Monday.

1,300 of Marin's Poorest Will Not Receive Increase In Benefits

Approximately 1,300 of the poorest Social Security recipients in Marin will not receive a recent 11 per cent increase in benefits authorized by Congress.

Elderly, blind and disabled persons who get public assistance in addition to Social Security are finding their monthly checks are no larger than before the benefits were hiked.

(For what life is like for those denied the increase, see page 5 for interview with two persons in San Rafael.)

"It's a very unfortunate situation, but it's completely beyond our control," said Edwin H. Leuin, district manager for the Social Security administration.

His office in San Rafael administers both Social Security and the public assistance programs for the aged, blind and disabled programs now called "supplemental security income."

It works this way:

According to federal and state regulations an elderly or aged person living in his own home with no other income than public assistance and Social Security cannot recieve more than $255 a month. (That amount varies slightly for the blind).

Before the 11 per cent hike in benefits, the individual may have received $100 a month in Social Security and $155 in supplemental security income.

As his Social Security benefits increase, his supplemental payments will decrease proportionately. If his Social Security rose to $111 a month, for example, his public assistance would drop to $144 so that his total income would not exceed $255. Social Security is considered income and as income increases, assistance payments are reduced, according to regulations.

But a person receiving only Social Security and no assistance of any kind would find his monthly check increased 11 per cent, to about $283 a month.

The federal law which authorized the Social Security hike contains no provision which would have forced states to pass along the increase in benefits to the recipients, according to Leuin.

The state legislature also could have enacted legislation which would have made certain that the elderly, disabled and blind receive the increased benefits, but hasn't done it, he added.

"I regret that we are unable to do anything about this; I feel very bad about it," Leuin said.

But unless Congress or the Legislature passes new laws the poorest will not get any more money.

CONDITION IMPROVES

Franco Leaves Hospital Bed

MADRID (UPI) — The condition of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, struck with a circulatory ailment and gastric complications, has improved and he can again take food normally, his doctors said today.

A visitor to the 81-year-old Spanish leader said he was able to get out of bed and walk around his hospital room.

A medical bulletin released at 6:30 a.m. EDT said the blood vomiting —which caused the 81-year-old Caudillo to step down temporarily as chief of state Friday and hand powers over to his designated successor Prince Juan Carlos — has not recurred.

"The acute episode has been overcome", the bulletin said, adding that Franco can again take food through his mouth.

Signed by seven doctors, the bulletin said:

"The Hematemesis (blood vomitting) suffered (by Franco) yesterday morning continues to be contained. Oral alimentation has been resumed, and movement of the member affected by phlebo-trombosis which necessitated his hospitalization and treatment has been renewed.

"The acute episode has been overcome. At present arterial pressure, venous pression, temperature and biochemical characteristics continue normal."

Members of the government and Franco's family also visited him today.

His wife Carmen, who has lived at the hospital since he was hospitalized 11 days ago, attended mass and smilingly told newsmen: "You are early today, aren't you." She would not comment on Franco's condition.

Information Minister Pio Cabanillas said Franco was in "fairly satisfactory" condition.

On his hospital bed, Franco signed a decree yesterday making the 36-year-old Borbon Prince of Spain and grandson of Spain's last ruling monarch acting chief of state.

The news of the transfer of power for the duration of Franco's illness stunned Spaniards. But the nation was reported quiet except for an apparently unrelated strike of 2,500 shipyard workers in the Basque city of Bilbao.

Franco had been hospitalized since July 9 for phlebitis, but medical sources said there was no connection between the circulatory ailment and Franco's hemorrhages of the digestive tract and stomach.

Franco's doctors did not disclose the cause of the bleeding.

Prince Juan Carlos and Premier Carlos Arias spent most of yesterday in Franco's hospital suite and emerged visibly shaken when they left for home late in the evening.

The prince's first function as acting chief of state was signing a U.S.-Spanish pledge of cooperation in military and other fields drawn up during a Madrid visit by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger the day Franco was hospitalized.

Tribunal Backs Jury Service Requirement

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Supreme Court yesterday ruled that the state s requirement of a year's residency before a person may serve on a jury is constitutional.

In a 4-3 decision, the high court rejected a claim that the requirement violates a criminal defendant's right to trial by an impartial jury and a new resident's equal protection rights.

The case started in San Diego where a superior court sustained a defendant's claim that the residency requirement was unconstitutional. The defendant, Irving Beale, was tried and acquitted, but the court order applied to all future civil and criminal cases, and San Diego Jury Commissioner Warren W. Adams appealed the Supreme Court to set it aside.

Explosion At Railyard: Two Dead, 127 Hurt

DECATUR, Ill. (UPI) — A tank car containing liquified petroleum exploded in a railroad yard near downtown Decatur yesterday, touching off a fire that left two persons dead and at least 127 injured — eight critically.

The blast and gas-fed fire devastated the block-long railroad yard and forced the evacuation of up to 30,000 persons from a three-squaremile area.

Shirley Tucker, a night cook at the little cafe that adjoined the bunkhouse in the Norfolk and Western yard where the explosion occurred, said she had just put the bacon on the grill to feed the hungry workers when the blast came.

"I knew them all by name or face," Mrs. Tucker said sobbing. "I saw them out here first.

"Flesh was hanging from their hands. They were laying here burning, screaming. They were on fire."

Danile Rogers, 67, a security guard at an appliance warehouse about three quarters of a mile from the blast, said, "It was like a flash of lightning. I saw buildings and warehouses all in pieces. Only the uprights were left."

The explosion and fire that followed destroyed hundreds of freight cars and rocked the downtown district of this city of 91,500 persons in the rich corn and soybean belt of Central Illinois.

Police Sgt. Bradley D. Collins described the rail yard and surrounding area as "just total devastation. For three quarters of a mile in any direction windows were blown out and chairs dumped outside."

Gov. Daniel Walker surveyed the scene of devastation while flames still jumped from freight car to freight car.

He called up a unit of the Illinois National Guard to aid battling firemen and police who directed the evacuation. The evacuees were allowed to return to their homes later in the day.

A railroad spokesman said 24 of the injured were employes.

The explosion was the third disaster to hit Decatur this year.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Hoffa Loses Bid In Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon had every right to ban James R. Hoffa from Teamsters Union politics as a condition of his pardon, a federal judge rules yesterday.

Hoffa

Judge John H. Pratt said Hoffa, former president of the union, could have stayed in jail if he did not like the restriction. Hoffa was released in 1971 and barred from union activities until 1980.

David Rein, one of Hoffa's lawyers, said there would be an appeal, but it was doubtful that the appeal process could be completed in time for Hoffa to run for office in a Detroit local as he had planned.

Hoffa went to jail in March to serve a 13-year sentence on convictions for jury tampering and mail fraud.

He was pardoned by the President Dec. 23, 1971, after being turned down for parole three times, but the pardon was made on the condition that Hoffa refrain from engaging in union activities until March 1980.

Hoffa contends he learned about the condition after his release and now says Nixon pardoned him for political porposes.

Bomb On Ferry

BELFAST (UPI) — A bomb exploded aboard the ferry Ulster Queen about two hours after it arrived from Liverpool today, police said. No injuries were reported.

Police said the blast followed a telephone warning from a caller identifying himself as a member of the Provisional Irish Republican Army, who said there were three bombs aboard.

The spokesman said army bomb experts searched the vessel but found no other bombs, and the area was declared clear at noon.

An Anniversary

SAIGON (UPI) — Vietnam today marked the 20th anniversary of its first official ceasefire with full-scale military attacks by both sides, the Saigon command said.

Communist troops switched their heaviest attacks to the central coast, blowing up a key bridge on South Vietnam's main highway and launching several small shelling and ground attacks in Phu Yen province, 250 miles north of Saigon.

Today is a common holiday in North and South Vietnam, called National Shame Day in both zones of the country.

In Cambodia, the military command said today government troops rescued 2,000 civilians fleeing from the Communists only 35 miles from the Cambodian capital.

Marks Mission

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — President Nixon, accepting a plaque from Neil Armstrong on the fifth anniversary of his historic first moon walk, said yesterday that the space mission was worth it.

Armstrong, now an engineering professor in Cincinnatti, gave Nixon a plaque inscribed with the signatures of all the astronauts who took part in the Apollo, Mercury and Gemini missions which culminated in the moon landings.

GRADUATE — San Quentin convict Raymond Banuelos, clad in cap and gown for last night's prison graduation ceremonies, tells how he as a member of the student advisory council at San Quentin, was "motivated to move toward higher education."

SAN QUENTIN GRADUATION

Warden Applauds Accomplishments

By MARY LEYDECKER

In many ways it was like any other graduation exercise.

Rows of graduates in black caps and gowns, some fanning themselves with their programs, speeches by students and faculty, musical selections, proud looking families and finally, the awarding of diplomas accompanied by handshakes and applause.

True, last night was about a month late for a graduation ceremony, but what made the event really unusual were the graduates — some 50 men who managed to earn high school and junior college diplomas and lesser certificates in the tough atmosphere of San Quentin.

Warden Kenneth D. Britt in a short speech acknowledged that "in a place like this. . . ." it takes a "rare kind of man" to make what he called, "one hell of an accomplishment."

The new warden also gave approval to the graduates' accomplishments in a practical manner — he allowed more family members to attend than in past years and even opened the doors to girlfriends and friends of inmate graduates.

One or two of the black-gowned graduates chatted quietly and smiled with relatives and friends throughout the ceremony, but others seemed lost in their own worlds, not even visiting with their fellow convicts.

The dark and olive skins of what seemed a majority of the graduates reflected the populations of California's big cities, rather than suburban Marin County.

There were some missing, too, last night. San Quentin official L. E. "Bud" Bolton noted that eight graduates, including six in the prison's tough adjustment center, were not present because they were "in lockup." Other men had been paroled, and some had been transferred to different prisons.

Michael M. Houk, the inmate valedictorian, had some serious advice for his fellows graduates. (Houk, who earned a certificate in office machine repair, like other vocational graduates was clad in prison denim rather than cap and gown.)

"If you're satisfied with the knowledge you now possess, then you are unwise. . . . like stagnant water," he said. "Don't make this victory your last one," he admonished.

Like the warden, other prison and county schools officials noted the difficulty of obtaining an education in San Quentin. But Virgil S. Hollis, county schools superintendent, said that "you gentlemen tonight" have received diplomas "that can be taken anywhere in the United States. . "

Finally the speeches and the music were over, and the men came forward to the familiar incantation of names, "Rodney J. Brown. . . . . Frank P. Gonzales. . Sammy Jara. . . . " and son on. High school, junior college, elementary school diplomas were handed out along with literacy certificates and certificates for a variety of vocational skills, including nursing.

After the ceremony, a relaxed atmosphere prevailed as families trooped to a prison dining hall for refershments, soon to be joined by their graduates, who would return to cells when the evening was over.

Report Shows Two SLA Members Cutdown Outside Burning House

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — As the Symbionese Liberation Army fought with police May 17, two SLA women crawled from the burning hideout, firing pistols, and were cut down by police bullets, according to a police report.

They were identified as Camilla Hall, 29, of Lincolnwood, Ill., and Nancy Ling Perry, 26, Santa Rosa.

It was the first report that any of the six SLA terrorists who died in the fiery battle had ever left the small, yellow stucco house where the group was surrounded by police and made its last stand.

The report was contained in a 138-page report drawn up by the police commissioners for Mayor Tom Bradley.

After the battle had broken out, and the house was in flames, the two women crawled out of an air vent hole in the stone foundation, where the SLA was firing automatic weapons, and fought a brief gun duel with men of the Special Weapons and Tactics squad, the department's elite unit, the report said.

Miss Perry cme out wearing military style fatigues, with a hunting knife attached to a web belt, the report said.

"When she was approximately 10 feet from the crawl hole, a second female, with short blonde hair, later identified as Camilla Hall, started to emerge from the crawl hole.

"She was firing an automatic pistol toward members of SWAT team two. At this time, automatic weapons fire was still coming from the crawl hole behind Miss Hall.

"Members of Swat team two fired toward Camilla Hall and she dropped to the ground," the report said.

(Coroner Thomas Noguchi said earlier that Miss Hall was the first to die, having been hit in the center of her forehead by a high powered bullet that killed her instantly.)

"She was then dragged back through the crawl hole out of the view of the Swat team members," the report said.

"Nancy Ling Perry then turned to her right and fired a revolver toward members of Swat team two. Members of team two returned weapons fire toward the crawl hole and Nancy Ling Perry. She fell to the ground approximately 10 feet from the crawl hole."

(The coroner said she was killed by bullets that severed her spine.)

The Swat team members kept up an exchange of gunfire with the crawl space hole — where the body of the SLA's leader, Donald Defreeze, who called himself "Field Marshal General Cinque," was later found — "until the automatic weapon fire ceased," the report said.

(The coroner said the evidence showed that Defreeze had killed himself with a pistol shot into his temple after all his followers had died of gunfire or from burns and smoke inhalation.)

The report concluded that while there had been some mistakes in the operation it was as a whole "handled with a high degree of professional skill by all levels within the department," and that the command decisions made at the time "for the most part proved to be both prudent and correct."

The FBI is still searching for renegade heiress Patricia Hearst, and Emily and William Harris, believed to be the last fugitives from the SLA cell that sprang to prominence with the kidnaping of Miss Hearst.

Year In Jail For Knifing

A Gate 5 man was sentenced to one year in jail yesterday and placed on three years' probation for attacking a woman with a knife in June.

Willard Homer Hammond, 39, earlier had pleaded guilty to a reduced misdemeanor count of assault. He was sentenced by Judge David R. Baty of Marin Municipal Court.

The attack on Elsie M. Joseph occurred after the two had argued. She suffered a broken nose and face cuts.

$2 Million For District Suggested

I-J Special Report

BERKELEY — A $2,094,240 allocation of gas tax gasoline tax revenue to the Golden Gate Bridge District has been recommended by a committee of the Metropolitan Transportation Commission.

The funds include $1,350,000 from Marin County's annual share of the revenue this fiscal year, $615,000 from Sonoma County and $129,240 from San Francisco.

The recommendation of the grant review and allocation committee will go before the full commission for ratification on July 24.

Marin County Transit District officials last month protested giving the county's share to the bridge district as in the past, but dropped their opposition when the two districts compromised on a dispute over a bill for bus transit. The county's share going to the bridge district put $337,500 into transit operations and $1,012,500 into capital costs for transit equipment and facilities.

San Rafael Firm Owner Plans To Fight Union

Threatened with a complaint of unfair labor practices in the 20-day-old strike of Machinists Local 238 against Marin County auto dealers and shops, a San Rafael firm owner declared yesterday he's going to "run the union out."

Scott Deming, operator of Marin Tire and Brake at 666 Irwin Street, said the union's "demands are just too much. . . No shop in Marin has ever run the union out, but I'm doing it now."

He denied a claim by Les Young, business agent of Machinists Local 238, that one of the shop's employees had been fired for refusing to cross a picket line. One employee quit after the strike began July 1, Deming said.

Young said the union headquarters in San Francisco was preparing a complaint to the National Labor Relations Board, citing the alleged firing and other charges he wouldn't specify.

Deming said he owns the tire and brake shop, and Carlos Transmission Service nearby, and that 12 of the two shops' 17 employees never were union members and the other five have quit the union since the strike began.

Young said the union constitution bars members from quitting during a strike.

Marin Tire and Brake has been heavily picketed during the week, Deming said, and hanged effigies of Deming have been displayed outside his tire store. Young said the demonstration is to "show support for members who might have been coerced into crossing the picket line and members who have been terminated (fired)."

San Rafael police report there have been no incidents of violence during the strike.

Mixed Glass For Recycling Is Accepted

The seven Survival recycling centers in Marin County are now accepting mixed glass for recycling, according to a spokesman for Survival.

Because of a new contract with a glass reclamation firm in Fresno, recyclers can now mix clear, green and brown glass, instead of separating them as required in the past. The metal rings on bottle necks need not be removed.

Survival centers also are now accepting unbundled newspapers and brown paper bags for recycling.

The centers are open every Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The locations are Tamalpais High School, Redwood High School, Sir Francis Drake High School, San Rafael High School, Terra Linda High School and the Novato City hall parking lot.

The Bolinas Community Center recycling operation is open every third Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Two Hurt In Crash Of Cars

One person was hospitalized and another injured in a three-car accident at 4 p.m. yesterday on the Golden Gate Bridge just north of the south tower.

Thomas G. Thompson, 20, of 90 Martling Road, San Anselmo, was reported in satisfactory condition today in Marin General Hospital with multiple fractures.

Ivorr James Samuel, 50, of San Francisco was treated for injuries at the hospital, then released.

The Highway Patrol said Samuel's southbound car was unable to stop for traffic which had stopped ahead, skidded out of control and hit the northbound Thompson auto. The two vehicles then collided with a third, driven by Marshall Davon Blackman Jr., 47, of San Francisco.

Old Adobe Employees' Pay Hiked

All employees of the Old Adobe Union School District in Petaluma will receive 11 per cent pay raises this year, district trustees have decided.

Supt. Dean D. Magowan said the raises, approved Thursday, closely parallel the current inflation rate.

Trustees also reviewed the district's proposed $2.8 million budget for 1974-75, which is $356,000 more than last year's, and gave tentative approval to Magowan's request for an administrative assistant for the central district office. No salary for the position was set.

The trustees approved a continuation of the early childhood education program at La Tercera School. Magowan said the program will continue as it did last year, with no further expansion. It now involves kindergarteners and first graders.

Panel Releases Milk, ITT Volumes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Judiciary Committee made public yesterday six volumes of impeachment information about the 1971 milk producer and ITT antitrust controveries, containing some of President Nixon's most profane language but little or no direct evidence showing he ordered government favors for campaign gifts.

The volumes contain the transcripts of several previously unpublished White House tapes, including Nixon's blunt order to Richard G. Kleindienst, then deputy attorney general, "to leave the God damn thing (ITT merger) alone," and his March 23, 1971, meeting with representatives of milk producers two days before he raised the federal price support for raw milk.

Accoording to the transcripts, Nixon told Kleindienst April 19, 1971, he didn't know "whether ITT is bad, good or indifferent. But there is not going to be any more antitrust actions as long as I am in this chair."

The transcript revealed nothing in Nixon's conversation with Kleindienst or John D. Ehrlichman, his top domestic adviser at the time, that would link the President to an ITT offer of $200,000 to help finance the 1972 Republican National Convention.

ITT eventually got a largely favorable settlement in the billion-dollar merger proposal by being permitted to keep Hartford Insurance.

Transcripts also were released for Nixon's March 23, 1971, conversations with former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally Jr.; the milk producers, and his staff.

The conversations showed the producers made a strong pitch for an increase in the price support on the basis of the economic needs of hard-pressed dairy farmers. Connally also pointed out their political clout in so-called "middle America."

Nixon frequently jumped into the conversations to philosophize about the spiritual value of rural America and the health value of milk. But nowhere does either he or the others make reference to the milk producers' $2 million campaign pledge. The producers eventually gave more than $500,000.

But the committee noted that the White House ignored its subpoenas for 66 tapes on the milk and ITT cases. And both subjects were included in possible impeachment articles which Democrats on the committee drafted this week.

Two of the six volumes are by President Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, James D. St. Clair, who maintained that Nixon played no role in settling the ITT suit, and that price supports on raw milk were raised because of "economic and traditional political considerations" —not because of the campaign pledge.

The material includes transcripts of six previously unpublished White House conversations.

In one of these, Nixon on April 19, 1971, brusquely ordered Richard G. Kleindienst, then deputy attorney general, to tell Richard McLaren, head of the antitrust division, to drop the antitrust case against ITT.

The conversaton followed months of pressure by ITT executives on government officials and came on the heels of the firm's offer to defray convention expenses.

"I want sometning clearly understood, and, if it is not understood, McLaren's ass is to be out within one hour," Nixon says in the transcript. "The IT and T thing — stay the hell out of it.

"Is that clear? That's an order. The order is to leave the God damn thing alone.

"Now, I've said this, Dick, a number of times and you fellows apparently don't get the message over there. I do not want McLaren to run around prosecuting people, raising hell about conglomerates, stirring things up at this point. Now, you keep him the hell out of that. Is that clear?

"Or either he resigns. I'd rather have him out anyway. I don't like the son-of-a-bitch."

Later Kleindienst was nominated to succeed John N. Mitchell as attorney general. He said at his confirmation hearing: "I was not interfered with by anybody at the White House. I was not importuned; I was not pressured; I was not directed."

On May 16, Kleindienst pleaded guilty to false testimony and was given a one-month suspended sentence.

However, nothing in the six volumes shows Nixon was aware Kleindienst was lying.

At one point, when the Supreme Court was about to make a ruling in connection with the ITT case, Nixon told Kleindienst: "I don't know whether ITT is bad, good or indifferent. But there is not going to be any more antitrust actions as long as I am in this chair ... God damn it, we're going to stop it."

The ITT case was eventually settled out of court. St. Clair contended: "There exists no testimonial or documentary evidence to indicate that the President had any part, directly or indirectly, in the settlement of the ITT antitrust cases."

The report said that hours after President Nixon met with milk producers on March 23, 1971, Ehrlichman set out to persuade them to reaffirm a campaign pledge of $2 million they had made back in late 1970.

According to testimony by Herbert W. Kalmbach, then Nixon's private lawyer and campaign fundraiser, Ehrlichman called him that same afternoon to set up a meeting for the following day with Murray M. Chotiner, a long-time Nixon aide and then a dairy lawyer.

"It's my best memory that I was informed there was going to be an announcement on the price support the following day," Kalmbach said in testimony the committee reprinted from the Senate Watergate Committee.

"And in view of that, that Mr. Ehrlichman asked Mr. Chotiner to talk to me and reaffirm to me that the milk people would reaffirm their pledge of $2 million to the 1972 campaign."

The committee said the milk producers made a pledge of $2 million to Nixon's re-election Dec. 16 or 17, 1970, in a letter hand-delivered to the White House. Two weeks later, Nixon signed a proclamation lowering the import quotas on certain dairy products. In all, milk cooperatives chipped in more than $500,000 to his re-election campaign.

The Agriculture Department in early March 1971 set the price support for raw milk at $4.66 per hundredweight, or about 79 per cent of parity. Two days after Nixon's meeting with the dairy leaders, the department reversed itself and set the support at $4.92, or 85 per cent of parity.

However, St. Clair said in his defense of Nixon: "Economic and traditional political considerations were the only basis of the decision to increase the price support level."

White House Hits Back At Evidence

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — The Western White House today made public a voluminous defense of President Nixon claiming a "complete absence of any conclusive evidence demonstrating Presidential wrongdoing" or justifying the "grave action of impeachment."

The 151-page brief expanded on the final summation by President Nixon's chief Watergate lawyer, James D. St. Clair, earlier this week before the House Judiciary Committee. The committee today began considering various possible articles of impeachment submitted to it by its chief counsel John M. Doar.

Doar was quoted yesterday as saying that the President should be impeached for "enormous crimes in the conduct of his office."

The brief discussed point by point charges that have been made against the President from the Watergate cover-up to his alleged failuure to see that the laws of the land were faithfully executed.

The brief said that all available evidence "conclusively demonstrates that the President had absolutely no prior knowledge" of the Watergate break-in and had no information "even remotely" connecting him with knowledge of hush money payments to Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt before March 21, 1973.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler yesterday denounced the committee, Doar, and chairman Peter. W. Rodino, D-N.J., for making a "shambles" of what should have been a fair hearing.

Ziegler said Doar had "shed his cloak of fairness" and the committee had conducted "a kangaroo court" that "distorted the factual evidence.

Doar recommended Friday that Nixon be impeached for "enormous crimes in the conduct of his office." The recommendations were agreed to by the committee's Republican minority counsel, Albert Jenner.

"The radicals and the partisans on the committee are distorting their constitutional role by presenting a biased and partisan case," Ziegler said, accusing Rodino of proceeding "in a partisan, unfair way."

Ziegler, his voice at times rising in anger, named five committee members he considered radical Democrats—Robert Drinan of Massachusetts, John Conyers of Michigan, Jerome Waldie of California, Jack Brooks of Texas and Elizabeth Holtzman of New York.

The rezoning, covering the ridges west of Homestead Valley, Tamalpais Valley, Marin City and Sausalito, calls for redesignating the land to a range of one home for every 10 acres to one home for every two acres.

It is one in a series of rezonings by the county to bring ridgeland zoning into conformance with the county general plan which lists the land as greenbelt open space.

Turkey, just as we deplore the earlier action by Greece" which brought on the crisis.

Pentagon sources said the Soviet Union had placed seven airborne divisions on alert before the Turkish attack.

British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan asked Greece and Turkey to send envoys to London for immediate talks to avert an escalation of warfare.

A emergency meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Brussels called on Greece and Turkey to begin the talks with Britain, which ruled Cyprus until 1960.

Both countries are allies in NATO and the conflict threatened to undermine the eastern wing of the alliance.

The U.N. Security Council called an emergency meeting at the request of Greece and Western diplomats saying the Turkish invasion would be the first item on the agenda.

Turkey imposed martial law in 14 of the nation's 67 provinces, including the cities of Istanbul, Anakara and Izmir. Istanbul's airport was closed to traffic.

"We are not going to Cyprus only to bring peace to Turks," Premier Bulent Ecevit told newsmen in Ankara. "We are going there to bring peace also to the Greeks. I sincerely believe our decision will be a great service to all humanity and to world peace.

"We were forced to take this decision after trying all political and diplomatic paths," Ecevit said. "I hope no fire will be opened on our forces and a bloody conflict avoided. We are going to Cyprus not to make war but to restore peace."

The island of Cyprus, which won independence from Britain in 1960, has a population of 648,000 persons — 80 per cent ethnic Greeks and 20 per cent ethnic Turks.

The island has been torn by conflict since winning independence by militant Greek Cypriots demanding "enosis" or union with Greece. Under a 1959 treaty, Britain, Turkey and Greece agreed to keep the island independent.

Richard Paul Silvas, 25, of San Rafael, will be sentenced Aug. 19 in Marin Superior Court for taking jewelry and coins from a San Rafael home on June 23.

More Than 1,000 Persons Baptized

Los Angeles Bans Nudity

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The City Council has adopted an ordinance banning nudity at municipal beaches, parks and playgrounds.

Acting Mayor Robert Wilkinson signed the ordinance immediately, setting the stage for it to become effective as soon as it is published, possible today.

Approval was on a 12-1 vote and followed a two-hour council debate and public hearing.

The ordinance won preliminary approval last week at a council meeting that was disrupted when Robert Opel, 33, the man who "streaked" the April 2 Academy Awards ceremony, disrobed in full view of an overflow audience. He was later arrested.

His Marriage Worthy Of Grade

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — A man in Alaska who flunked a course in "Problems In Marriage" 33 years ago at Washington State University thinks his grade should be changed because he has been married 31 years to the same woman.

The man, not identified by the university, launched his crusade for a better mark in 1968 when he wrote the registrar:

"This year I completed 25 years of marriage to the same woman and have raised two fine boys. Is it possible that you could extend me credits for this course?"

This spring Registrar C. James Quann received another letter from the man who said he now had completed 31 years of marriage to the same woman and was "trying hard to get a degree before my youngest child does."

Court Date Set In Morals Case

A 40-year-old Forest Knolls man has been ordered to appear July 30 in Marin Superior Court to answer charges of molesting three San Geronimo Valley boys.

The board set 7:30 p.m., Aug. 1 for a public hearing on the budget.

Doar's Report On President Weighed through his personal agents at the seat of government and their immediate subordinates. has made it his policy to cover up and conceal responsibility for the burglary, the identity of otter participants, and the existence and scope of related unlawful activities."

It said the means of this policy included perjury, purchase of silence, obstruction of justice, destruction of evidence, interference with with investigations and misuse of federal agencies including the CIA.

"For all this, Richard M. Nixon is personally and directly responsible," it said.

A 360-word summary of evidence submitted by Doar with the proposed articles said circumstances "strongly suggest that President Nixon decided, shortly after learning of the Watergate break-in, on a plan to cover up the identities of high officials of the White House and CRP (Committee to Re-elect the President) directly involved in the illegal operation...."

The second article said the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist in 1971 was "part of a pattern of massive and persistent abuse of power for political purposes," but did not accuse Nixon of any direct role.

Doar's evidence summary said: "The President's concern with the Ellsberg case was not with espionage or national security, but with politics and public relations."

His third article cited Nixon's refusal to comply with subpoenas and said that left "no recourse but through the exercise of the constitutional powers of impeachment and removal from office that are granted to the Congress."

Doar's last proposed article flatly declared that Nixon's claimed tax deductions of about $500,000 for giving up his vice presidential papers "constituted a fraud upon the United States" and involved a deed prepared in 1970 but backdated to 1969 in order to appear to be effective before a law outlawed such deductions.

Pair Booked In Probe Of Murder

HILLSBOROUGH, (UPI) — Two persons were booked on murder charges yesterday after the blood-smeared auto of missing matron Lois Jean McNamara was found at the San Francisco International Airport.

"We're now operating on the theory that Mrs. NcNama was murdered even though we don't have a body," said police Chief Russell Fisher.

Booked on murder complaints were Austin Brown, 25, and Carol Campbell, 27. Brown was charged with the slayings of Mrs. McNamara and Richard Pipes, 29, a Santa Cruz grovery clerk killed June 25.

Mrs. Campbell, of Palo Alto, was charged with being an accessory to the slayings.

Mrs. McNamara, 53, disappeared a week ago.

Man Caught In Watering Act

Although gardeners advocate watering after sundown, San Rafael police became suspicious when they saw a man carrying bottles of water into an open field at 11:15 last night.

He was watering his marijuana plants, officers said.

David Michael Terzing, 26, of 14 Pleasant Lane, San Rafael, was booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of cultivating marijuana. No bail had been set and he was scheduled to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Church Burglar Eludes Police

Police were alerted at 3:47 a.m. by a burglar alarm at St. Anthony's Church on South Novato Boulevard. When officers arrived, they saw a figure run into the hills behind the church; they were unable to catch the suspect.

Apparently nothing was taken from the church.

Rizzo Calls For Death Penalty

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Mayor Frank L. Rizzo has called for the return of capital punishment, saying he would "personally pull the switch if they run out of people who want to do it."

Rizzo told the state American Legion convention, "I'm not sure if it's (death penalty) a deterrent, but I know one thing, that when they pull that switch, he's not around to commit another crime.

"I'll tell you this," said the former police commissioner, "I will personally pull the switch if they run out of people who want to do it. I'm available."

GLOOM BEHIND WINDOWS

Life On Fourth Street

By PAT ANGLE

Fourth Street in downtown San Rafael on a sunny July morning.

Tanned women in tennis dresses park their sports cars for a spot of shopping or a trip to the hairdresser.

It's all part of the good life in marvelous Marin.

But behind the store windows and above the quaint little shops the not-so-good life lurks. It hangs out in rundown apartments and cramped rooms which look as if they haven't been painted in 20 years.

Affluence ends at the bottom of a dark flight of stairs leading to hallways smelling of a hundred starchy meals and other things it doesn't pay to analyze too carefully.

Jack Moffett lives in two small, dingy rooms on the second floor of a dilapidated building. His only window looks out over the roofs of stores and an ugly tangle of concrete, metal and gravel which the tennis players and the shoppers never see.

Moffett, 67, is a retired construction worker and a bachelor who lives alone. He has a brother in San Francisco but doesn't see him often because he can't afford the bus fare.

"I went over there last Thanksgiving," he said with a smile, "but even then my nephew had to come and pick me up."

His total income is $255 a month, derived from Social Security and public assistance (now known as supplemental security income).

He did not benefit from a recent 11 per cent increase in his Social Security because his supplemental check was cut proportionately and so his income remained the same. (For how this came to pass, see story, page 1.)

Moffett pays $125 a month for his apartment, a tiny kitchen and equally small bedroom which have been his home for 11 years. That leaves him $130 a month for food, clothing and all the little necessities of life.

It isn't much in Marin.

"I sure don't eat no New York steak on that," the craggy-faced Moffett said with a chuckle. "I eat a lot of beans and macaroni. And eggs — a lotta eggs. I really get tired of eggs. I eat so many that sometimes I feel like cackling."

He buys meat "about twice a month" and uses it — a pinch at a time — to enrich his meals of macaroni, rice or bread. "I used to have meat more, but it's gotten so high that I just can't afford it much. Even so, by the middle of the month I don't have much money left. But I make it do."

Moffett doesn't get out all that much simply because he doesn't have the money to go many places. He spends most of his time just sitting or talking to friends or watching the second-hand television set he bought from a friend several years ago.

He had a dog a while back but had to get rid of it because "the landlord didn't want any more pets around here." Anyway, he doesn't know how he could afford to feed the animal if he had it now. Being poor can make for a lonely life.

MAKING ENDS MEET — Jack Moffett, seated here in the room which serves him both as a kitchen and living area, is one of the county's poorer residents. Yet he did not benefit from a hike in his Social Security check.

(Photo by Jim Kean)

But the hardest thing about being "hard up," according to Moffett, is simply "having to do without what you'd like to have."

And it's tough to have to worry constantly about the future, especially inflation, he said.

"Sure I wonder how I'm going to make it if prices keep going up. But you just gotta take what they give and hope that maybe prices'll go down."

If he had more money, Moffett said he would "live better than I live now. I'd eat better, for one thing.

"And I'd take a few little trips, maybe go to San Francisco once in awhile and other places around here. I'd like that."

Effie Turner, 60, lives in the next apartment building in two rooms very similar to Moffett's.

The place is rundown, with discolored walls and worn floors. But she tries to keep it pretty with a bright bedspread here, a picture and a couple of plants there.

She shares her home with two cats, a black and white feline named Tippy and Tippy's son, Sassy-boy.

Mrs. Turner suffers from crippling arthritis which is getting worse all the time. Still, she manages to clean the halls, steps and communal toilets in the building in order to get $25 a month taken off her $125 rent.

She receives aid to the totally disabled along with a Social Security check for a total of $255 a month. "I have about $150 a month to live on and it's hard to do," she said. "We used to get food stamps, but they cut them out. And I just can't get by without them."

Mrs. Turner did not benefit from the Social Security increase since her disabled aid check went down when her Social Security went up.

She has watched helplessly as prices have skyrocketed. "It's terrible. I used to buy two pounds of beans for about 60 or 70 cents and not all that long ago. Now they're $1.59 a pound."

The dry cat food she feeds her pets has gone up more than 50 per cent too. But she'd rather not eat herself than give up her companions.

Mrs. Turner has children and grandchildren in Hawaii, Modesto, Texas and Santa Rosa, but they all have their own families and aren't able to help her out much.

It gets pretty tight at the end of the month and sometimes she has to borrow a few dollars from a friend. Sometimes her "boyfriend," a bartender, helps out a bit.

She can't afford a TV. To entertain herself, she will crochet or quilt. Right now she is making a quilt covered with bright butterflies from old scraps of material. It is for her daughter-in-law.

Effie Turner is a cheerful little person and says she doesn't worry about the future. "What's the use?" she asked. "There's nothing I can do about it."

But anxiety does creep into her conversation. "I don't know what people are going to do if this inflation keeps up," she said. "Especially people with children."

Prosecution In Reinecke Case Rests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The prosecution rested its perjury case yesterday against California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke after reading grand jury testimony indicating Reinecke lied about when he first discussed with John Mitchell an ITT offer to finance the 1972 GOP convention.

Reinecke and Mitchell both swore before the Senate Judiciary Committee that they did not discuss the ITT offer until September, 1971, two months after an ITT anti-trust suit was settled.

But Reinecke told a grand jury he discussed it with Mitchell in May, 1971, two months before the settlement.

Reinecke's lawyer, James E. Cox, was to argue today for dismissal of the charges on the grounds that a former Watergate prosecutor did not adequately advise Reinecke of his rights during an interview with government lawyers.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker has said he will rule on the dismissal motion Monday, before Cox is scheduled to open his defense.

Reinecke's Senate testimony came during 1972 hearings on the nomination of Richard Kleindienst as attorney general.

He is charged with having sworn falsely that he did not tell former Attorney General Mitchell of the ITT offer for convention financing aid prior to settlement of an antitrust suit against the giant corporation.

According to grand jury testimony read to the jury Friday, Reinecke told Mitchell about the ITT offer of up to $400,000 two months before the antitrust suit was settled in July, 1971.

Mitchell has also sworn before the Senate panel that he did not discuss the ITT offer until September, 1971. Mitchell has not been indicted in the case.

In his grand jury testimony, Reinecke said he had discussed "the financial commitment" with Mitchell in a telephone conversation on May 21.

Asked specifically whether he had talked with Mitchell about the ITT pledge, Reinecke replied: "I think that it is safe to say that I did."

Second Chance For San Rafael Harbor

THE SAN RAFAEL canal advisory committee has been studying with interest proposals for a new small boat harbor near the mouth of the canal.

About two months ago, the committee invited the San Leandro city marina supervisor over to describe that community's newly emerging marina and harbor complex.

Surely anything San Leandro can do, San Rafael can do better. And San Leandro does have an enviable shoreline park complex.

About a month ago, San Rafael's committee reviewed Dan Coleman's East San Rafael planning study which recommended a marina complex at the mouth of the canal. The council approved that plan in 1966, but there has been no steps toward implementation.

More recently, J. Meyerhoff Corp. of Baltimore, owner of lands adjacent to the proposed yacht basin-site, has indicated an interest in providing a yacht harbor there as a part of its contemplated development.

THUS IT APPEARS one of these days, the Canal Advisory Committee may recommend to the city council that some action be taken toward the creation of a marina complex near the mouth of the canal.

Already one member of the canal committee has voiced his opposition in a private communication distributed to his fellow committeemen.

He opposes what he perceives to be the "development" of another segment of San Rafael bayfront for the benefit of only a few — 600 yachtsmen and private business interests.

Upon careful consideration, such opposition can only be viewed as short-sighted.

A SMALL BOAT harbor adds to the quality of life for a host of people. Boating is mostly a family affair. Many senior yachtsmen along San Rafael canal are second generation yachtsmen. A generation ago they began as children accompanying their parents on boat outings on the bay. Today they are accompanied by their own children, and occasionally even by grandchildren. If you search, you can find youngsters who represent the fourth generation of San Rafael families who have enjoyed boating.

The Sea Scouts have a long and illustrious history on San Rafael canal. More youngsters could be involved if only better facilities were available.

Only a handful of San Rafael high school students participate now in boating (and those depend on Marin Yacht Club for the loan of El Toro boats in which to learn sailing on the canal). Again, more facilities would provide more young people with the opportunity to become involved in boating.

Boating appeals to senior citizens too. Many men and women beyond retirement age are still active boaters, as a visit to any yacht harbor along the canal will attest. They enjoy outings on the bay as much in the golden years of life as does youth.

Fishermen come in all ages, sexes, colors, races, income brackets. During the long summer days, many working people enjoy a boating run out to the bay fishing grounds after work, before sunset.

It is hard to imagine a recreational activity which appeals to so many diverse interests as does boating — and enhances the quality of life of all who participate.

THE COUNTY auditor's office recently released figures showing the amazing amount of taxes paid into the county treasury on boats and boat-related properties and businesses. Each of those boat-related businesses provides interesting and challenging jobs, too. Economically, then, boating is a valuable asset to a community.

The city of San Rafael made a regrettable blunder when it sold its previous municipal yacht harbor and permitted it to be filled, paved over and converted to a shopping center. In a sense, San Rafael doesn't deserve a second chance to develop a harbor. But it appears to have a second chance and it must not blunder again. San Leandro and Berkeley have shown the way. Opportunity is knocking. We must respond affirmatively.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to Hubert J. Huling of Corte Madera and Faye Tregenza and Mark Cain of San Rafael, who risked their lives to pull an accident victim from his burning vehicle last April. They received certificates of commendation from the California Highway Patrol last week.

BRICKBATS to San Rafael officials for towing away cars parked on San Pedro Road, which was not marked to warn motorists that it was a towaway zone. The cars belonged to picnickers at McNear's Beach County Park, where the parking lot was jam-packed, as it usually is on hot weekends.

BRICKBATS to bicyclists, adults as well as youths, who dart in and out of traffic without regard to traffic laws, running red lights and even pedaling the wrong way on one-way streets. It's no wonder that bicycle-vehicle accidents are zooming.

A BRICKBAT to the county assessor's staff for underestimating Larkspur's assessed valuation by $3 million, thus forcing the city to make a last minute budget trim.

A BOUQUET to the Marin County Open Space District for buying 154 acres of open space atop North Ridge in Kent Woodlands, a part of Baltimore Canyon.

BOUQUETS to the State Department of Transportation for deciding to start work soon on traffic lights at the dangerous Highway 37-Lakeville Road intersection.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Americans Allowed Watergate To Occur

As we enter our third year of Watergate and continue to wonder where it all might end, we must use Watergate as a lesson rather than an albatross around the neck of any one political party.

Americans cannot point the finger at those in political office and accuse them of wrongdoing without also pointing the finger at themselves. This nation, more than any other past or present, is a representative government which performs only those things which its citizenry tolerates.

We could easily say that those who were responsible for Watergate are now being tried but I contend that there has been a change in the American character which permitted the events of Watergate to happen. For example, if all Americans believed that it was morally wrong to accept illegal campaign contributions in return for political favors, then no one would accept such contributions and no one would expect political favors.

I would like to quote a Bible lesson which illustrates the point I am trying to make.

For freedom Christ has set us free; stand fast therefore, and do not submit again to a yoke of slavery.

For you were called to freedom, brethren; only do not use your freedom as an opportunity for the flesh, but through love be servants of one another. For the whole law is fulfilled in one word, You shall love your neighbor as yourself. But if you bite and devour one another take heed that you are not consumed by one another.

World War II Crew Prepares Reunion

The USS Hunter Liggett (APA-14) from World War II is having a ship's reunion. It will be at the Pfister Hotel in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on August 8-9-10, 1974. For information please write to: Joseph Rubino, National Chairman, P.O. Box 1307, Glendale, Calif. 91209.

The ship was commissioned at the Brooklyn Navy Yard in June, 1941 and decommissioned in March 1946 at Olympia, Wash. A Navy ship with a Coast Guard crew and Captain Louis W. Perkins landed the First Marine Division at Guadalcanal on August 7, 1942. It made several trips unloading combat troops and supplies to all of the Solomon Island campaign. Again on November 1, 1943 the crew of the Hunter Liggett with Captain R.S. Patch landed the Third Marine Division at Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville. In both invasions the USS Hunter Liggett was the flag ship. The crew and ship earned four battle stars in the Asiatic-Pacific Theatre of war! The crew and the ship was credited with shooting down six enemy aircraft!

Admiral Owen W. Siler, commandant of the U.S. Coast Guard, served as a line officer for two years on our ship! Douglas A. Munro, signalman first class, the only recipient (Medal Of Honor Award) in the history of the U.S. Coast Guard also served on our ship!

Please find a little spot to print this in your newspaper. We had many men from your state and local area that served on our ship and have been unable to locate. This is our second reunion and many years have passed since we all reunited for a celebration! Anything that you can do to help us locate our shipmates will be greatly appreciated!

People Are All Screwed Up Even In Quiet East Hampton

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. — I was glad to discover last weekend that Washington isn't the only place in the United States where people are all screwed up. Even a town as affluent and peaceful as East Hampton has terrible problems. We were house guests of the Stones and they asked us who of our dear friends in East Hampton we would like to see.

"How about the Grabowskis and the Peregrines?" I suggested.

"WE CAN'T HAVE the Grabowskis with the Peregrines," Stone said. "It seems two years ago Grabowski borrowed Peregrine's barbecue spit and returned it the next day with the handle missing. Grabowski didn't mention it much less offer to pay for a new handle and so Peregrine hasn't spoken to him since."

"Well, what about the Cummerbunds?"

"We're not speaking to the Cummerbunds," Stone said curtly.

"I thought they were your best friends."

"THEY WERE until I played tennis with Tom Cummerbund last weekend and he called a footfault on me. You don't call footfaults on your friends. I've never called a footfault on Tom in my life, and believe you me he footfaults all the time. He can't serve without having both feet in the court."

"Let's forget Cummerbund," I said. "I'd love to see the Wackenbushes."

"You can see him but not her," Stone said.

"Why can't I see her?"

"She ran away to Newport with a gardener."

"Was Wackenbush sore?" I asked.

"NOT AS MUCH as Henry and Lucy Trilby. You see it was their gardener. They're not talking to Wackenbush because they feel if he had paid more attention to his wife the Trilby's rhododenrons would still be alive."

"So much for the Wackenbushes," I said. "You know who we'd love to have dinner with — the Coffinbacks."

"You can have dinner with them," Stone said. "but we won't."

"But we all grew up with the Coffinbacks," I said.

THAT'S EXACTLY the point. Two weeks ago we gave a dinner party for Ann Miller, the tap-dancer, and we invited them. Then last weekend they gave a dinner party for Tony Martin and you know what they did — they asked us to come in for coffee afterwards."

"Boy, this East Hampton is full of intrigue," I said. "I think it would be easier if you could tell me who we can see."

Stone thought for awhile. 'There's the Pattersons. We like them very much, and I know you do too."

LET'S INVITE the Pattersons then," I said.

"They're not here," Stone said. "They rented their house for July and went to England. What about the Profiterolles?"

"I don't know the Profiterolles," I said, "but we'll see them anyway."

"Nah," said Stone. "They'd bore you to death."

"I don't see how you people make it through the summer," I said.

"It's not easy," Stone admitted. "There are a lot of people out here we'd love for you to meet, but we can't stand their house guests. And there are a lot of house guests we'd love to see, but we can't stand the people they're staying with."

"WHY DON'T WE just go to a Howard Johnson's for dinner and forget about it?"

"No way!" Stone said. "The last time I was there I had a fight with the manager and I told him I'd never come back."

"I guess that just about does it," I said.

"Wait a minute. I just remembered, there's the Rucksacks," Stone said.

"You mean you know one couple in East Hampton that nobody is mad at?"

Charges Of 'Racism' Employed To Gain Political Advantage

WASHINGTON — What do the proprietors of the specialty shops along Wisconsin Avenue in Washington's Georgetown have in common with the authorities who oversee prisoners at the District of Columbia jail? And what do both of them share with the rather numerous Americans who still believe that academic excellent should be rewarded by the universities theoretically devoted to pursuit of just such excellence?

All of them, to hear their more hysterical adversaries tell it, are guilty of racism.

THAT IS NOT my own verdict, but partly the result of a sloppy linguistic fashion as unconscious in some faddists as the use of "you know" twice in each sentence. Yet, with some others, it is not unconscious at all. It is a cynical play for political support. Either way, it degrades the public dialogue, raises tempers where a calm discourse might otherwise settle problems, and it is overdue for discontinuation.

Let the record show that every person who disagrees on any issue with a member of a racial minority group is not automatically therefore a racist.

In Georgetown, leases cost dearly. Some people have life savings in boutiques, antique shops or restaurants there. A high percentage of their gross is from walk-in trade, since strolling in Georgetown is an old Washington pastime.

THIS PLEASANT tradition has been ruined of late by the descent on Georgetown of street vendors, who set up tables on the sidewalks, block traffic, sell cheap junk at high prices, pay no sales taxes and look scruffy. The existing merchants of Georgetown have complained and the police have begun occasional enforcement of longstanding laws about blocking sidewalks and so on.

Now the vendors have organized in retaliation, and distribute handouts charging that the merchants are guilty of "racism." They insist the established shops simply want to keep blacks out of Georgetown. Yet by my own count last Saturday, of 34 vendors set up along Wisconsin and M Street, only eight were black — this in a city whose population is three-quarters black. The assertion of "racism" thus clearly is a cheap effort to make the merchants' legitimate complaint seem motivated by bigotry.

WHEN TWO CONVICTS grabbed seven hostages at the D.C. courthouse last week and started airing their complaints about their treatment in jail, the word "racism" inevitably was used — but this time it may have had some basis. In any case, true or false, it was used there by inmates with whom the word has become part of their daily vocabulary, like some other words I will not attempt to sneak into a family newspaper.

Less excusable, because from people charged with dispassionate analysis of public affairs, has been much of the comment on the Marco DeFunis case at the University of Washington.

DeFUNIS, you remember, was the student who was turned down twice by the university's law school although he had a Phi Beta Kappa key and scored high on admission tests. He was rejected in favor of black applicants who scored lower, and he took his suit on the matter all the way to the Supreme Court. The court avoided ruling on the substance of the case, because eventually he was admitted and now has graduated.

But my colleagues in the commenting business did not sidestep a decision. Some were for DeFunis, somewere for the policy of preferring minority applicants as way of making up for years of earlier antiblack discrimination.

Reasonable arguments can be made in both directions; to me it seems right and necessary to make up for that discrimination but not by applying reverse discrimination to other hard-working applicants. Rather, every effort should be made to upgrade minority applicants by special courses or whatever else may work.

MANY, PERHAPS most Americans agree with me on that. Anyone who knows me knows I am a long, long way from being a racist. Yet a few who argue the other side on this case have thrown that word about to cover all who disagree with them.

The public dialogue in our country should be on a higher level than that — especially as regards "racism," for there is enough of it still around for all of us to try to pinpoint and erase. Being accurate and honest might help that effort.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

American Policy In Cyprus Based On Mixed Loyalties

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

In Cyprus the United States is caught in the rip-tide of east Mediterranean politics going beyond the traditional enmity between Greece and Turkey.

It is a cast in which heroes and villains play alternate roles. The United States must weigh its loyalties to allies in NATO, its needs for an uninterrupted flow of Mideastern oil, its hopes for peace between Jew and Arab and, perhaps finally, the value it places on detente with the Soviet Union.

ALL OF THESE are intertwined in the overthrow of Cypriot President Archbishop Makarios.

Whatever the promises of non-intervention by the Greek government, there remains little doubt that the Greek government played a role in Makarios' fall.

Makarios had demanded the recall of 650 Greek army officers under contract to run the Cypriot National Guard. Makarios accused them of plotting his downfall and assassination.

AND WHEN HE fell, these were the officers who installed in his place a man with the unlikely name of Nikos Giorgiades Sampson, the last part of which he adopted as an alias under British rule of Cyprus.

Sampson is a high school drop-out whose rise to fame and fortune was along the assassination route among the forces demanding union with Greece.

AND THIS LEADS us to Brig. Gen. Dimitrios Ioannides, the mysterious strongman in back of the Greek government.

Ioannides is chief of the Greek secret police and onetime underling of Gen. Geroge Grivas in the Cypriot underground. Grivas died last winter but in common with Ioannides he had an undying hatred for Makarios, whom both regarded as a traitor to the cause of Enosis, union with Greece.

Makarios denied he had abandoned the concept but held it was impossible because of Turkish opposition.

THE ELECTED Greek government fell to a military coup on April 21, 1967, and almost from that moment, the U.S. position has been a subject of debate.

On Dec. 12, 1969, Greece announced its withdrawal from the Council of Europe just ahead of being suspended on charges, among other things, of torture of political prisoners.

The council is an international deliberative body for the promotion of European unity consisting of 17 members.

The council sharply criticized the United States when it resumed shipment of arms to Greece in spite of its known authoritarian character.

U.S. POLICY has been one not to rock the boat in spite of its disapproval of the past and present military regimes. NATO, it said, was more important. In recent months, Greece has become a home port for units of the Sixth fleet.

It may be suspected that the U.S. hands-off policy has helped to embolden the present regime to interfere in Cyprus. The Turks believe events in Cyprus to be a coup by degrees, and that the next step will be an attempt to annex the island to Greece.

LITTLE IS known of the actual workings of the present Greek regime. It makes no mention of a return to democracy or to free elections. Nominally, it has a civilian premier but a small, select group of officers is believed to give the orders.

If your luck isn't what it should be, write a "p" in front of it and try again. — Bob Edwards.

The effect of the people's agreeing that there must be central planning, without agreeing on the ends, will be rather as if a group of people were to commit themselves to take a journey together without agreeing where they want to go: with the result that they may all have to make a journey which most of them do not want at all. — Friedrich A. EXILED, BUT ACTIVE

Richardson Defies Classification

By LOUISE SWEENEY
The Christian Science Monitor

WASHINGTON — Elliot L. Richardson, says one longtime friend, is "just not an anecodtal man." But that friend, David Ives, tells a story from their Harvard days together that offers a glimpse into the private character of this public man:

"A bunch of us were living in adjoining rooms at Winthrop House, and we had a game. We were in a destructive phase then. The game was throwing a small hatchet at someone's door, and the door we chose was his. He was studying hard behind it. We took turns hurling the hatchet at the door, Indian style. It made an absolutely thundering racket. But he kept on studying three feet from the door. We virtually destroyed the door, but he kept on studying. That gives you some idea of his powers of concentration."

Richardson has been unflappable in the face of other hatchets at his door — most recently during last fall's "Saturday night massacre" when he resigned as attorney general rather than obey President Nixon's order to fire special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, his former professor.

That ended, temporarily, a Nixon administration career in which he seemed to have been secretary of practically everything — Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (then $88 billion, 110,000 employees), Secretary of Defense (then $85 billion, 32,000 civilians, and one million in armed forces) as well as Undersecretary of State, and head of the Justice Department as attorney general.

Right now Richardson is holed up, like some Republican prince in exile, in the red brick castle of the Smithsonian Institution. There, amid the medieval ivy and diamond-paned windows, he is a fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center. He also gives speeches and is currently working on a book about his experiences in government.

Richardson's friend David Ives, now president of Boston public TV station WGBH, talks about the courage that seems as much a part of the former attorney general as his carefully parted teak brown hair. "When he was in the service (in World War I) as a medic, he told me that during that time he felt almost an exhilaration in the continual real danger and trying to help people, with the bullets and shells whizzing around him . . . And he's never flinched at anything dangerous politically. He didn't consider his career in the Saturday night massacre."

Although born into a long line of Boston doctors (even his grandmother was one), secure in wealth and society, he decided at Harvard not to be a surgeon. Why did he break the mold?

"Well, I think it was partly because I had too much of a sense of what it was like. I always, when I was young and still do, enjoy suspense stories. And I thought it would be like reading a book where I'd already peeked at the end . . .

"The things that appeal to me most in human beings are a sense of the scope and reach of their humanity. It is inseparable in a way from the feeling I have about what they represent in terms of what you might call highwater marks, the limits of the outreach of human capacity . . . people whose aspirations and efforts . . . seem to transcend human limitations without being any the less human. This was one of the appealing things about Rembrandt, Michelangelo, Beethoven, Churchill.

"The same thought underlines a sermon I gave at the dedication of the First and Second (Unitarian-Universalist) Church in Boston."

That sermon is rooted in one of Mr. Richardson's favorite texts about the miracle of the loaves and fishes in which Jesus said, "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost" (John 6:12). In it he speaks of "the need for a sense of completeness that can only be met by belief in God . . . And here we perceive love: He picks us up. He keeps us. He values us."

The Richardson who gave that sermon is the Elliot Richardson who is thought of as a Republican Mr. Integrity, whom Time has described as having "a reputation for rectitude and propriety." And one of the Baltimore investigators in the Agnew case describes him: "That guy was so straight that he could not even think corrupt" (A Hearbeat Away," by Richard M. Cohen and Jules Witcover). The question, then, is what makes Richardson tick, what is his own credo?

"My view of morality," he answers, "springs from two rather simple propositions: one is that other people are also real. That means that their claims, their interests, desires, aspirations, feelings, are just as important as mine.

". . . The other thing which is related to this is that none of us as an individual is capable of being described in all our individuality and separate identity except in terms of other people . . . I like to quote, even though to some extent it has become hackneyed, John Donne's lines about 'no man is an island.' The part I always use most is the sentence which goes, 'For I am involved in all mankind.'

"So that leads me to a feeling about all morality and the kinds of things you see. All human wrongs against each other involve a denial of these things. All cheating is an assertion that I'm more important than other people. The willingness to grab more than your share, to let yourself do it, is what you see in padding expense accounts, cheating on insurance claims, accepting kickbacks on engineering commissions, misrepresenting facts on a political issue in order to win votes . . . "Every one of them comes down to the same proposition: a willingness to let yourself act on the basis that if you can get away with more for yourself you will . . . I discovered a long time ago that anything I did like that made me so uncomfortable that it wasn't worth it. It's a sense of physical discomfort."

Most of this is said in a careful voice with a soft luster, like the polished mahogancy of a Sheraton table, but without the long, aristocratic "ah" sounds of a Kennedy.

Richardson doodles, constantly. His doodles are intricate, semi-famous; one of them fetched several hundred dollars at a charity auction recently.

"I was quite a cartoonist, you know; that was my main college activity," says the man who graducated cum laude from both Harvard College and Harvard Law School, where he was president of the Law Review.

Part of the enigma of this man is that he defies classification. He has been called a shrewd politican, crack attorney general, supermanager of vast government agencies, but he is also an avid watercolorist, indefatigable dancer and party-goer, tennis player, trout fisherman, shooter of rapids, championship collegiate boxer, bird watcher and poetry freak (Shakespearean sonnets, Emily Dickinson), who in his secret life would like to have been the abbot of a medieval town.

He was, too, the brilliant law student who clerked for Judge Learned Hand ("a towering human being") and Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, but who also cooked for them from his cordon bleu cookbook: fillet of sole bonne femme for Judge and Mrs. Hand, lobster Newburg and creme brulee for Justice and Mrs. Frankfurter.

Richardson met his wife at a Bachelor's Ball in Boston. "I looked around the floor for the most attractive girl I could spot so that I could cut in on her," he remembers. "Which I did." But she was so popular that it took a whole evening of cutting in and being cut in on before he found out that her name was Anne Hazard, that she was from Peace Dale, R.I., and was a senior at Radcliffe.

He began by calling her for a date, but she was busy: "I was by then, oh, 31, I think," says Richardson, "and a very spoiled bachelor. But there was something about her that made me persist in this . . . I had a lot of competition but my persistence eventually prevailed," he says.

Mrs. Richardson said, "He likes challenges — I didn't fall like a ripe apple at his feet."

Their marriage has produced three children: Henry, 19; Nancy, 17, and Michael, 14. The family plans to take a trip to the Soviet Union later this month, but Richardson says that's not dropping a handkerchief for his presidential candidacy. He admits, though, that he'll have some "high-level talks" while he's there.

BUT CAN'T SHOW IT

Ford Believed Unable To Resist Nomination

By GODFREY SPERLING JR.
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON — Gerald Ford, in the estimation of close friends, is increasingly seeing himself being cast in the role of President, either in the near future or after 1976.

By this, the close-in assessment goes, it is not meant that Ford has suddenly begun to hunger for the office.

But those who talk to him privately say his conversations increasingly indicate Ford now views the presidency as moving in his direction in a way which he probably will not be able to resist.

Thus, while protestations of less-than-avid-interest in seeking the presidency in 1976 still remain his stated position, his friends now are certain that the Vice-President has of recent weeks accepted the inevitability that he will likely get the nomination two years hence — and that he could not possibly turn it down.

Further, Ford is pictured as taking a private view now that President Nixon stands perilously close to impeachment when, at the same time, he is asserting that the President should not be impeached.

His friends say that Ford's public utterances on impeachment prospects are understandably colored by the vice president's loyalty to Nixon.

They say that such loyalty is very much a part of Ford's makeup, that his support for the Republican party and President Nixon were the very qualities that were evident in the former Michigan congressman when Mr. Nixon tapped him for his vice-president.

But they also point out that politically Mr. Ford takes great risks if, at any point, he assumes positions that would be widely interpreted as undercutting the President in order to help destroy Nixon and thus open the presidency to himself.

This effort to avoid a show of overambition on Mr. Ford's part has, in the view of intimates, tended to give the public the impression that the vice president is, like Vice-President Agnew before him, little more than a man who makes speeches around the country in behalf of Republican political candidates.

The truth of the matter, they contend, is that Ford is being highly effective in helping the President with his programs on Capitol Hill.

Despite the appearance of being always out on the stump across the U.S., aides say the vice president puts in from 10 to 15 hours almost every week in his office at the Senate Office Building — where he works assiduously with members of Congress on behalf of administration bills.

Already, Ford is credited with having "made the difference" on at least one highly important defense-appropriation vote in the House.

Further, his weight is being felt on a wide range of defense-related legislation; on economic and veterans legislation; and on the bills being considered on consumer protection, legal services, and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Ford, it is said, is downplaying this activity of dealing with congressmen on legislation for another reason: He is aware that Agnew quickly got the reputation, as a new vice-president, for being abrasive when he sought to be persuasive with members of Congress in Nixon's behalf.

Ford is operating purposely in a low-keyed and extremely polite and considerate way with his old colleagues as he seeks to prevail upon them to help the administration.

The vice president also is being relied on by the President for substantive input into new domestic programs as well as for tactics on how best to get legislation through Congress.

In fact, in many ways the vice president is coming up to former presidential counselor Melvin Laird's forecast that Ford would become the "most activist" vice-president in history.

In one area the vice president has not taken advantage of his opportunity to be — as one old friend expressed it — "the strongest and most independent vice president in history."

"He had the opportunity," this source says, "to develop his own domestic programs, to chart his own course on a number of key issues of the day. He could be talking about these as he tours the country."

"But he obviously feels this would undercut the President — and make it appear that he was sandbagging Nixon for his own selfish purposes.

NO MORE BARGAINS

The Water Challenge: Costs Vs. Sacrifices

By JOHN HERITAGE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

Bargain-basement days are ending for yet another U.S. resource — water. As demands increase, society is having to pay an ever-higher price in technology and effort to tap this supposedly bountiful item.

The overall problem now is not so much one of quantity though this will be an increasing concern. On the average, streamflow in the "lower 48" states totals a hugh 1,200 billion gallons a day. The real issue is finding enough clean water at the right place at the right time.

First, federal surveys discovered that drinking water in the U.S. falls far short of the high quality that might be expected of a modern, technological society. Many municipal treatment systems are strained by escalating water use and by new, hard-to-treat chemical pollutants. Some 2.5 million people receive substandard water, according to 1969 figures.

Next, energy planners have learned that lack of water could be a serious obstacle to plans for new domestic fuel supplies. In the arid West, it would be impossible to convert massive coal reserves to useful energy with just local water supplies, a recent independent study concluded.

Finally, a world food shortage has sharply increased the concern about the supply of water and land for farming. If the U.S. accepts a greater "breadbasket" role for the globe, water for irrigation may have to be increased. Where most of the available water has been parceled out, this will be a tough proposition.

Easy answers to these mounting pressures and conflicts are not available. Most of the nation's rivers already have been dammed for their water supply or set aside for their natural values. And techniques to tap new sources such as seawater have not yet lived up to earlier hopes.

Unless the country undertakes intensive management plans, "we face a major water crisis somewhere, someday," said Daniel Dreyfus, water specialist for the Senate Interior Committee.

As a first step in a new, waterwise era, the resource must be more carefully allocated and conserved. Big water consumption for energy development will have to be balanced against such other uses as drinking water, irrigation, recreation, and industrial processing.

Water reuse will become more necessary, though officials of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency believe that more research is needed to ensure that recycling will produce safe, clean, water supplies. Already, the consumption of fresh water exceeds the dependable supply in some areas, such as the Rio Grande and lower Colorado regions.

And uniform drinking-water standards and updated purification systems are urgently needed. Authority for these important steps is provided in legislation now in the final stages of congressional action.

The water challenge is not insurmountable, the experts add. "If we want water somewhere for a particular purpose, it can be (had). But we have to decide the price we are willing to pay and the sacrifice we are willing to make," said M. Gordon Wolman, professor of geology at John Hopkins University.

DOESN'T OWN A CAR

By PAT BALMES

"We broke the record for tandems by doing 200 miles in 10 hours and 45 minutes at the Davis race in May. We only got off once for the hour lunch break," said Pat Crawford of Larkspur.

A fast tourist with Marin Cyclists, the registered nurse trains by pedaling to her private duty position in Mill Valley, rain or shine all year round. She doesn't own a car.

With her friend Art Briggs she came in 10th among 550 starters in the Fifth Annual Double Century Ride at Davis May 15. Their Schwinn Paramount was one of three tandems racing.

"You all start out at once. Most riders appreciate riding behind a tandem because they give a good draft. Tandems are good on the flat and downhill, but are slow going up," she said. One advantage of a tandem over a single racing bike is psychological — if one rider tires, the other can pump.

They carried candy bars, bananas and nuts and four bottles of tea with honey on their carrier.

"YOU ARE wise to take the hour for lunch that they give you and not take any other rests. At the end of the day you are so tired you couldn't get back on anyway, so best to keep going," she woman said.

She was not athletic as a child and "if I can do it, any woman can."

A year and a half ago, when she was out hiking, she met Art, who introduced her to cycling. They learned about a bike trip to Los Angeles which was planned to cover 100 miles daily for four days. They started training.

"We stayed at motels on the trip; we just wheeled the bikes in. Almost everywhere motels accept bikes. I am careful to wrap the handlebars so they won't mar the walls," she said.

To ride 100 miles takes six to 10 hours, depending on how fast the group moves. If you can ride well in Marin County hills, you can ride well anywhere, she believes.

She developed into a good rider fast and rides 1,000 miles a month now. When she feels good she can ride in 32 minutes from her trailer court in Larkspur to her job in Mill Valley taking care of Charlie Ryder, the handicapped son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Alfred Ryder of Mill Valley.

"It is a 15-mile round trip, pretty good exercise. Now all the neighbors recognize me. One got after me because I was walking my bike," she said.

WOMEN ARE known to be good endurance riders, she maintains. In the 200-mile races, a strong woman rider will do proportionately better for her size in the second hundred miles than a man will.

"It is in the second hundred miles that some men will drop out," she said.

Men seem to have more explosive power and this cuts down their endurance, she believes. Light weight has something to do with it, but even a heavy woman, if she is a good rider, will have more endurance than a man, she said.

She does not really like racing but prefers long distance touring with Marin Cyclists or just with Briggs.

Last fall the couple rode 1,000 miles in 14 days carrying about 20 pounds each of clothing and extras. Starting at Virginia City, Nev., they pedaled down Highway 395 to Lee Vining, where the then snowy Tioga Pass goes over Yosemite National Park. They toured Kings Canyon National Park and through Sequoia National Park to Lake Isabella and back on Highway 395 to Virginia City.

She enjoys touring with Marin Cyclists. Their June overnight ride went to Calistoga, where the members camped out. Usually the "sag wagon" brings food and extra tires on overnights, she said.

She is planning to participate in Marin Cyclists Twin Century ride in August — 100 miles up to Point Arena to stay overnight and 100 miles back down the coast.

The cyclist participates in the ladies ride every Tuesday led by Kathleen Graves. "It's good for beginners. If you get tired you just drop out." The two experienced riders go on, however, sometimes as far as Glen Ellen.

HER INTEREST in exercise started aboard the hospital ship Hope docked at Jamaica, where she was an intensive care specialist in 1970 and 1971.

"It was a lot of hard work. It sort of led to cycling; that is where I first started jogging, mainly because of cramped living quarters. You have to get out and exercise," she said.

The Hope was in Jamaica to educate the island's medical personnel, she said.

When her duty ended she took an eight-month bus tour through Columbia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia, Central America and most of Mexico.

"It was wild; I had to adapt to a totally different way of life. I learned Spanish on the trip. You learn or you could not get along. On buses your legs get cramped; they were made for small people," she said.

The people were helpful. The bus drivers would tell her about cheap places to stay. She had a hot shower only three times during the eight months, she said.

She had to be flexible and take whatever bus or train was available because one might not be able to get on a crowded bus.

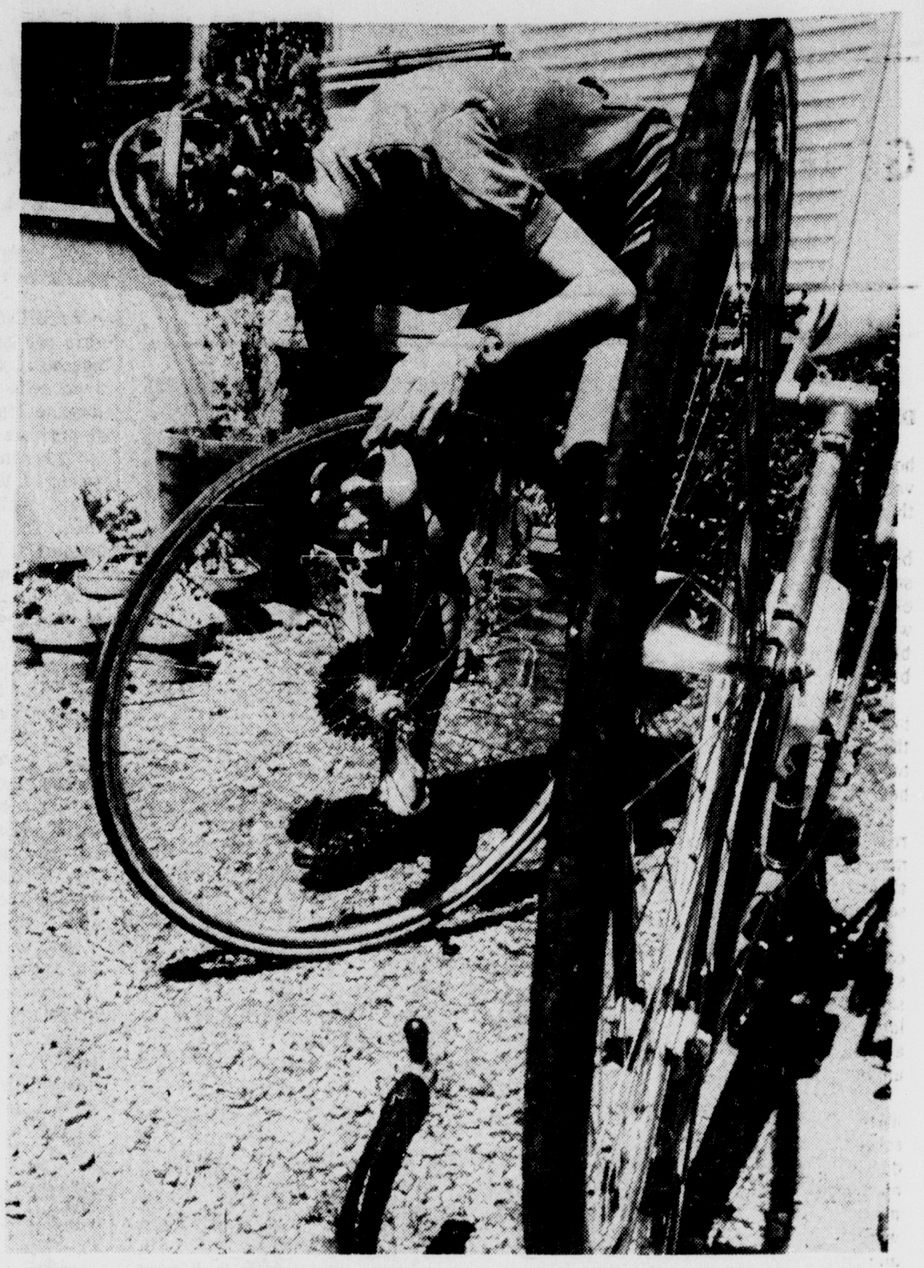
WOMEN THERE are more protected than American women. The people were surprised at a woman traveling alone.

She particularly enjoyed Peru, where she learned about the Indian culture and thought the Andes very beautiful.

"I wanted to do it. Had funds allowed I would probably have stayed two years and come all through South America," she said.

She loves adventure and has found it again in long distance bicycle touring.

PAT CRAWFORD (left) and Art Briggs of Larkspur broke the tandems record in the 200-mile Fifth Annual Davis Double Century Ride in May. "When you're used to riding a racer and you get on a tandem's back seat and you cannot steer or work your brakes, you are nervous at first," said Pat, a fast tourist with Marin Cyclists.



REGISTERED NURSE Crawford trains for long distance tours by pumping 15 miles round-trip to her Mill Valley private duty job every day, rain or shine. Here she removes race wheels with higher gears for time trials and tours and replaces them with commute wheels for climbing the steep hill to work. (Photos by Bob Hax)

THE LAST WORD

One Small Community Whose People Care For Each Other

By PAT BALMES

Belveron, the little community bounded by Tiburon Boulevard and Trestle Glen Road in Tiburon, has residents who put themselves out for their neighbors.

One such couple is Capt. (ret.) and Mrs. Don Arntz, who live near the Belveron bus stop. They have offered to escort women who must walk home alone at night from the bus stop.

Three women have been attacked in the Tiburon area. Two of them were raped, one near the Arntz home, according to Carol Arntz.

"It is no inconvenience to us. Any time a woman thinks she needs an escort, we would walk or drive her home even if it is the middle of the night", said Mrs. Arntz, a biology teacher at Mill Valley Middle School.

She believes society should be more caring and more protective of its women.

"As a biologist I can tell you that any culture, any country that does not protect the young and the females is on its way down the drain. It aggravates me that people leave a woman alone, saying it's her choice that she must walk home alone in the dark. Sometimes that is the only kind of job she can get," she said.

MRS. ARNTZ suggested that Belveron women keep the Arntz phone number in their wallets and call them when the women are ready to leave their jobs late at night.

"There is one lady we know who is a waitress. In the winter it gets dark early. We will be watching for her," she said.

Another demonstration of caring was reported by Belveron Association president Don Batten, who has been reelected annually since 1968.

"Seventy-five people showed up at 9 a.m. on the Fourth of July to build playground equipment for little kids in Belveron's mini-park. We worked four days over the holiday weekend and put in another 13-hour day last Sunday," he said with satisfaction.

He had signed a promise for the community with Jay Beckwith, playground designer, to produce at least 10 volunteers at each work session. Batten was delighted with the turn out.

Many teen-agers were among the builders and worked hard on the project for little children; there was nothing in it for the teen-agers, Batten pointed out.

Strengthened by hot food served by a committee of neighbors, the volunteers built climbing equipment, slides and swings using "pealer cores" of logs, tires dangling on chains, cargo nets and drums.

"WHEN I moved here in 1959, I hardly knew anyone. When the garden at Belveron's entrance died because nobody wanted to water it, Opal Hanson called a meeting about landscaping the entrance and invited the city manager." Batten made some suggestions and, to his surprise, was appointed association president.

He discovered that attorneys, architects, a printer and various other professionals lived there and enlisted their volunteer help. They incorporated the area, put in an automatic sprinkling system so the entrance's new landscaping would flourish and started a monthly newsletter.

His next project was a bus stop shelter, built of train trestle wood by volunteers.

Two more caring residents, Carol Schoenstein and Ann Johnson, started the petition which resulted in stop signs where children cross Tiburon Boulevard.

Several years ago, when the son of Mr. and Mrs. Masao Segi was hospitalized after being hit by a car, Belveron residents put on a dance and raised $1,000 to help with expenses. Many Japanese-Americans lent a hand, according to Batten.

Batten believes Belveron's friendliness is helped along by "cheap dances including food, music and a belly dancer," such as the annual spring dance to welcome new people to Belveron.

Belveron's sixth annual mini-street fair will be held on Sept. 2 and many of those caring people will come to lend a neighborly hand.

It's The Twist

The twist is the latest in summer headgear. It's made by pulling the neck of a T-shirt onto the head like a toque. Then pulling the sleeves to the back twisting them into tight ropes, criss-crossing them and wrapping in the front. It's finished by tying them into a small, tight knot, reports Women's Wear Daily.

Thursday's Independent-Journal incorrectly reported that registration would begin Tuesday and parents were required to be in the water with the child during the half-hour classes.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Wildlife Education Center Dedicated

By MOLLY MARIN

The National Audubon Society's Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary in Tiburon dedicated its new George Whittell Education Center today.

Two hundred guests were invited for speeches, refreshments and tours of the new building and the Lyford-Dickey House in Tiburon.

Putman Livermore spoke on the sanctuary's evolution and the work of his mother, Caroline S. Livermore, one of the founders of the Marin Conservation League, in acquiring the land with the help of Elizabeth Terwilliger of Mill Valley.

Pierre Joske, director of Marin County Parks and Recreation, also spoke.

Officiating were Philip Schaeffer, sanctuary manager; Paul Howard, National Audubon Society western region representative; and Dr. Elvis J. Stahr of New York City, National Audubon Society president, former secretary of the Army under President John F. Kennedy.

MRS. FREDERICA Rohrer of San Rafael was honored on her 80th birthday last night at a dinner at the Valhalla Inn in Sausalito hosted by her four sons, Peter, David, Robert and Paul Rohrer.

MRS. Rohrer, a former resident of San Francisco, was active in music circles for many years and is a member of the American Federation of Music Clubs.

THE PAST SIX months have been traveling ones for children's author Wilda Ross of Mill Valley.

She spent a month in Afghanistan visiting her daughter and son-in-law, Martha and Rick Gauthier, and met her new grandson.

AT HOME in Mill Valley are the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Dana Lawrence Rudebeck who were married at St. Joachim's Catholic Church in Costa Mesa on July 6.

The bride is the former Karla Ann Miller of Newport Beach. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Karl Miller of Newport Beach. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Rudebeck of Mill Valley. His grandmothers Mrs. George Rudebeck and Mrs. Harold Norfolk both are Mill Valley residents.

The couple met while both were attending California State Polytechnic University at San Luis Obispo. Dana is a graduate of Tamalpais High School and was graduated with honors from Cal Poly in June. He majored in city and regional planning, and is employed with Bechtel Corp. in the Community Development Department in San Francisco.

MR. AND MRS. Jerry Cook of Mill Valley became grandparents twice within a month.

On June 11 their daughter, Nancy, and her husband, Edward Rodriguez, became parents of a daughter. Another daughter, Annette, and her husband, Robert Crosat, became parents of a son on July 10.

Both couples live in San Francisco.

DIANE ZANINI of Guistine and Ronald Omo of Novato were married June 15 at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Fresno.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Zanini of Guisine, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Omo of Novato.

The newlyweds went on a wedding trip to South Lake Tahoe and Washington, D. C.

LIVING IN Belvedere are the newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Dick Gallegly (Alma Carroll). The couple was married July 6 at the First Unitarian Church in San Francisco.

Alma, a freelance newspaper and television writer is the daughter of the late Joseph Serpa and Mrs. Luduvina Goulart Mello of Stockton.

Gallegly is production chief for Quinn Martin Productions, which films "The Streets of San Francisco," "Cannon" and "Barnaby Jones." He was also production manager of "The FBI" for six years.

A GARDEN party was held Sunday afternoon to celebrate the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Kiligan of San Rafael.

Their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Kiligan, gave the party for 50 friends and relatives at their Petaluma home with the help of Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery Von Lehr of San Anselmo, the son-in-law and daughter of the Phil Kiligans.

The anniversary couple has just returned from a two-weeks' vacation visiting four islands of Hawaii.

If Teens Are Sometimes Rude, Older People Can Be As Well

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I read Eleanor B's column on how teens should behave on vacation. But how about one for the older folks?

1. While waiting for a cab in a big city for 15 minutes with a small child in my arms, two elderly women took it, and when I protested, they mumbled about "young teenage brat."

2. I have seen older folks get in a cafeteria line and decide at the register that something is too costly or too fattening; then hold up the line returning it.

3. I have worked as a waitress in a big tourist city and many of the rude people are elderly. They expect better service than the young.

4. I have seen at a tennis court that works on the honor system, a few "seniors" who start at 9 a.m. and two hours later they're "still finishing up a deuce game." If you say anything you're "fresh."

5. I have a 5-year-old in a wheel chair. I went to a local school to register her for kindergarten and had three teens open doors and another helped me up and down stairs with the wheelchair. I come out of stores and restaurants and most older people only care about getting out the door first.

Now my Mom is almost 60 and my in-laws almost 70, and I love them dearly. And I agree there are seniors who are polite but it's not fair to lump people in one category — "rude" — just because they are young.

Oh yes, when young people lose their luggage, many times they listen to reason and wait. I've seen a lot of elders scream and start a scene because of lost luggage.

I'm not for teens and against seniors, but fair is fair. There's good and bad in us all. — PAT S.

RAP:

I have a 14-year-old girl friend who is insanely in love with a super rock star. She is constantly talking about him and pictures herself as his girlfriend.

She has almost all his posters and wishes she could get one of him in the nude (which he hasn't posed for yet).

Her name is the same as one of his song titles, and she feels this song was made especially for her. She doesn't like guys her own age. Says they're immature, but I think she's a little afraid to mix.

Is this normal for a girl to fall in love with someone she's never met? — C.F.

C.:

Falling in love with the unattainable — a TV star, or rock singer — is a normal step on the way to growing up. It's a safe kind of hero-worship and makes shyness easier to bear. — H.

C.F.:

But 14 is a little old for this sort of daydreaming. Maybe your girlfriend's shyness keeps her immature, or maybe — just maybe — she aspires to be a groupie. — SUE

RAP:

I went with one guy who always wanted me to wear super short skirts so he could show off my legs to his friends and make them jealous. Next I dated a fellow who preferred me in pants or long dresses as he didn't want his male friends ogling my legs. Which is preferable? — LEGGY

Conversion Of Slacks A Mistake

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I will be making maternity clothes in the near future. I have a slacks pattern that fits me beautifully and am wondering if I can convert it to a maternity slacks by just placing the stretch panel on my regular slacks pattern? — MRS. E. N.

DEAR MRS. E. N.:

This would depend entirely on how much you will gain. Some women can practically wear their regular clothes to the end and others are exceptionally large.

There is no way you could wear regular slacks with the added panel. I would say that it would be worthwhile to use some of the slacks you already have, rip the front seam to the crotch and insert a panel of the stretch knit. You could certainly wear them for a long while before changing to maternity slacks, which are cut much larger all over.

DEAR EUNICE,

Some of my friends are wondering why there are often darts in the back of patterns labeled suitable for knits, yet when we buy these dresses ready-made, they are made straight in the back. I don't care for the bulk of darts in knits. Is it possible to eliminate the darts? — MRS. A. J.

DEAR MRS. A. J.:

The clue to the darts was when you said the pattern was suitable for knits. This means that you could also use this pattern for woven fabrics.

Since woven fabrics do not conform to the body and are not as soft as knits, the darts would provide a certain amount of fitting. With knits, you don't care for such fitting and it would be perfectly acceptable to eliminate the darts. Usually this type of knit dress depends on a soft tie belt for ample fitting.

DEAR EUNICE,

Recently I purchased a piece of knit fabric for slacks and since it wasn't as wide as I usually find, I couldn't get the front and back cut without cutting one piece in the reverse position. Now the pants don't look the same at the side seams — one side looks darker. The fabric was a solid color. How could this happen? — MRS. J. E.

DEAR MRS. J. E.:

If you look closely at a knit fabric you will find that the stitches are directional. This is very easy to detect with a sweater knit because the stitches are looser. For this reason, you must cut all pieces in the same direction. The shading you noticed was very much the same as you would find if you cut velvet, satin, or any napped fabric in two directions.

Wear your pants. Chances are that no one will notice, but be very aware of this in the future. You could ruin more than a pair of pants.

DEAR EUNICE,

I was given a lovely piece of Thai silk. However, I have read somewhere that there is some special shrinking and handling required when using this fabric. Please give me the details. — MRS. C. G.

DEAR MRS. C. G.:

I will have to repeat what I have written about many times. If you are intending to wash a garment after it has been completed, by all means prewash the fabric. This will tell you immediately just how washing will affect it.

Hopefully, you will have a little extra fabric to play with. If so, measure it carefully, then wash it, dry it and remeasure to see if it has shrunk and also to check the appearance. I have also found that dark colors do not hold up as nicely as prints, and lighter colors; the dark colors seem to lose their clear, deep hues.

Finally, remember to preshrink all trims and notions that are to be used. Also, if you can find it in your area, I recommend the all-polyester Metrosene thread that has been made in Switzerland for all fabrics.

Sewer Permits Asked For Moderate Housing

The Mill Valley Human Rights Committee has asked the city council to reserve all remaining available sewer permits in the city for low and moderate income housing.

Committee chairman Edith H. Freeman said the request was agreed on at a meeting Tuesday.

The council has been debating how to ration the sewer permits now available to the city. Recently, the Regional Water Quality Control Board partially lifted a sewer ban in the Mill Valley area and granted the city 1,479 permits.

But all but 350 to 400 have been committed to projects now under way or about to begin.

A statement being sent by the committee to the council notes that committing these remaining permits to low and moderate income housing "will work a hardship on individuals who have waited impatiently for two years to build homes; yet we must point out that the poor, the elderly and those on fixed incomes have been waiting even longer for decent housing at prices they can afford in Mill Valley."

If the council does not take this step, says the committee, "the rapid trend toward becoming solely a community of upper income people will quicken."

Officer Defends His Mustache

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Patrolman Daniel Gilchrist, fired from the Albany police force for refusing to shave off his mustache, says he doesn't see how it would hinder his work.

Gilchrist obtained an order in U.S. District Court directing the police department to tell why the firing was legal.

Gilchrist, 24, married and the father of two, says no civilians objected to the mustache and his wife liked it.

In his court action, he is also asking for damages of $100,000.

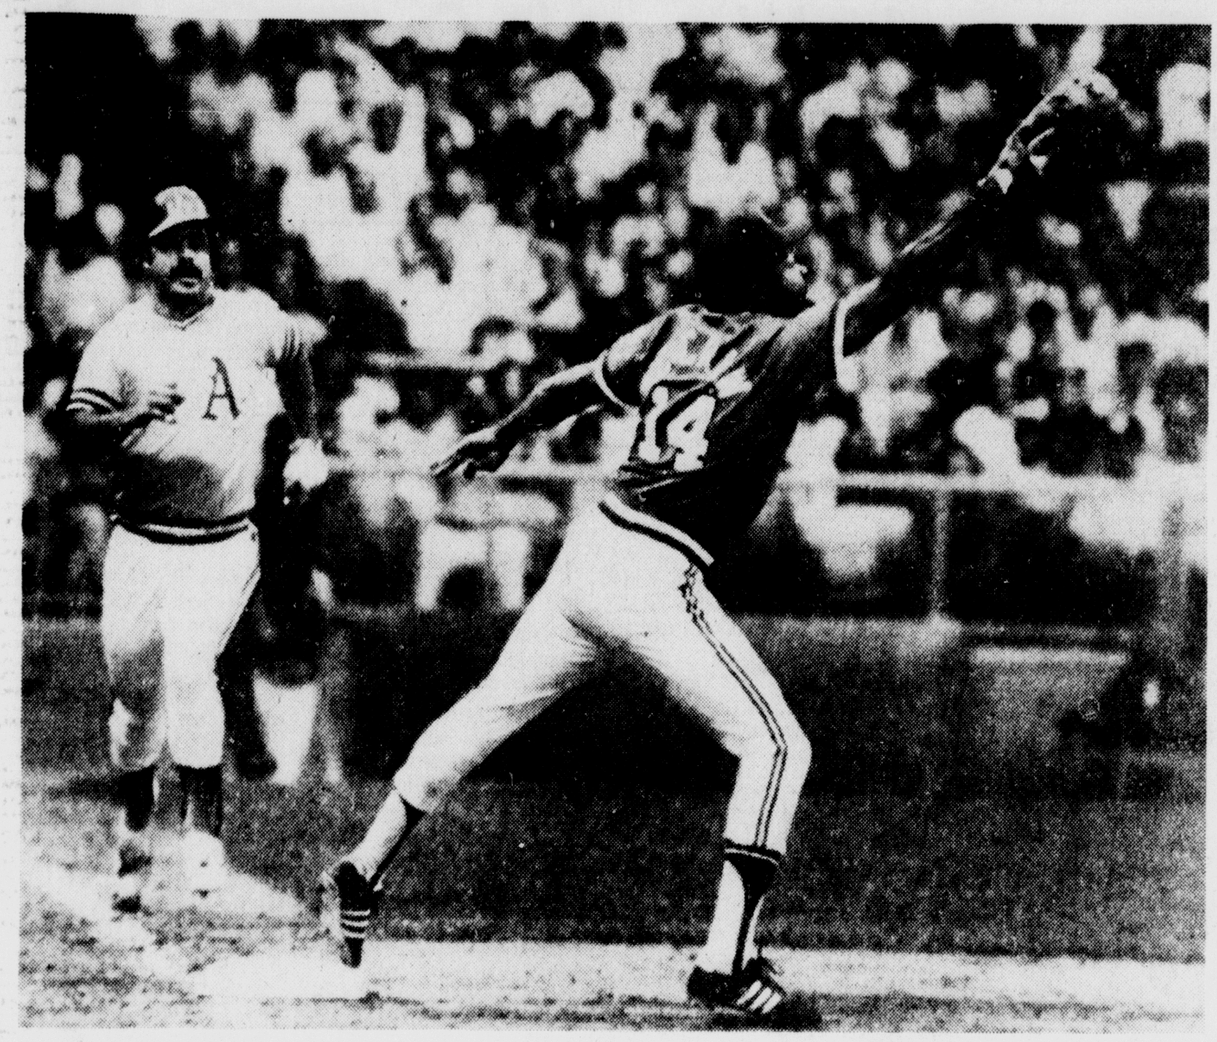
Indian Pitcher's Performance Worthy Of Curtain Call



THE ONLY ONE — Oakland's Sal Bando chugged down the first base line in the fourth inning last night in Celveland and became the A's only baserunner of the game when indian pitcher Dick Bosman, fielding Bando's infield grounder, threw over the head of first baseman Tom McCraw. Bando reached second, but died there. (UPI Telephoto)

Bosman Takes A Bow After No-Hitting A's

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Baseball players don't usually make curtain calls after a game but Dick Bosman made one last night.

A crowd of 24,302 fans chanted "We want Bosman, we want Bosman," after the 30-year-old Cleveland right-hander had used only 97 pitches in hurling a no-hitter as the Indians snapped a six-game losing streak with a 4-0 victory over the Oakland A's.

Bosman, who leaped into the air and yelled after striking out Bill North for the final out of the game, came out of the dugout a few minutes after his masterpiece and told the crowd, "I want to thank you for your enthusiasm and support. This is a great night for me."

Bosman, who was in the Indians' starting rotation at the start of the season, made one start in April and was sent to the bullpen after the Cleveland-New York Yankee trade on April 26 that sent four pitchers to the Indians.

"You just can't go home. I had to hang in there. Gaylord and Jim Perry told me to hang in there and things will break my way. They finally did after two months," said Bosman. "This is the hardest I've thrown in years and I have to thank Gaylord for helping me set some goals.

"Gaylord started me thinking on the mound and told me to try to go hard for six or seven innings," said Bosman, who faced only 28 batters and struck out four.

Sal Bando was the only Oakland batter to reach base and that came on a throwing error by Bosman in the fourth inning.

"When I picked up Bando's slow roller, I threw the ball to first and it sailed on me. Don't blame Tom McCraw for not catching it. It was my night all the way, even the error," smiled Bosman.

"I was a bit shook before the ninth inning. I told myself that it is just (catcher) John Ellis and me. Concentration is the key to this game and I really concentrated on the last three hitters."

"I told John before the game to catch me on your belly if you have to but make me keep the ball down. He really did get on me, especially in that last inning."

Bosman's father came down from Kenosha, Wis., to watch his son pitch and it was the first time he had seen Dick take the mound this year.

"Dad has a funny working schedule this year and he hasn't been able to see any games. I really am glad that my mom and dad were here o

Baseball's Worst Play-By-Play Man

If there is a worse play-by-play announcer in baseball than Monte Moore, I don't want to know about it. An example of his work occurred during Thursday's game with Cleveland. Moore had no sooner started telling his listeners that people in Cleveland were speculating that George Hendricks would make the All-Star team when his sidekick, John Miller, interjected that it had already been announced that Hendricks had in fact made the team. I feel that to be a successful play-by-play man one must be honest with his audience. Moore isn't. . .

Speaking of baseball announcers brings to mind the fact that Dizzy Dean is gone. It's sad that baseball has lost characters like Walter "the Great" Mails and Ole Diz within days of each other. Baseball needs more Daffys, Dusters, Babes, Dizzys and Satchels. Harmon? Claude? Come on. . .

AS PREDICTED in this space, Bruce Bochte is the latest Santa Clara Bronco to make the big leagues. He's a first baseman with the California Angels. . .

Another prediction along those same lines is that Novato's Tom Thomas will be up with the Pittsburgh Pirates before the year is out. . . he was called up to Charleston, W.Va., of the AAA International League the other day, a promotion from Thetford of the AA Eastern League.

Why hasn't anything been made of the fact that Reggie Jackson and Bill North are talking again? I was standing with North during the big Gaylord Perry game the other night and was heartened to hear him giving Reggie a few hitting tips. Now it only Ray Fosse can recover from his disc removal. . .

Ron Bryant couldn't believe that Tommy John had been left off the All Star team. This was a real injustice. Next to Mike Marshall, John is the most deserving pitcher in the National League. . .

Wes Westrum shook off congratulations on his being retained to manage next year. "I've been there before," he said. Wes had quite a few complimentary things to say about Marin's John Boccabella including that he feels that there should be a job in baseball for Boc upon retirement. . .

The big story in baseball by the time September rolls around could be Lou Brock's assault on Maury Wills' record. John Bench's arm was never more impressive than when he threw out Brock on TV Monday night. . .

CHRIS SPEIER is playing great ball lately. I hope he stays on the right track for the next 10 years or so. . .

Claudell Washington has the broadest shoulders in baseball. His name fits straight across the back of his uniform. Herb Washington's name on the other hand almost forms a half circle on his back. . .

Willie Mays immediately remembered Alonzo Perry when I mentioned it to him Tuesday night.

Bud Harrelson needling Chris Speier Tuesday night during batting practice: "Hey Speier. I've been on the injured list for a month and you only beat me by 19,000 votes. You must be having a terrible year.". . .

PREDICTIONS: In the National League, Pete Rose will be MVP, with Mike Marshall winning the Cy Young Award and Randy Jones the Rookie of the Year. In the American League, Reggie Jackson will repeat as MVP, Gaylord Perry will win the Cy Young, and Mike Hargrove will be Rookie of the Year.

Another Race Slated Today For Intrepid

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The defending America's Cup champion Intrepid — disqualified in its latest yacht race due to a collision — was to make a delayed return today to the U.S. observation trials.

Intrepid, leading all contenders with an over-all record of 10 victories and four defeats, was unable to race yesterday because archrival Courageous bowed out with minor equipment trouble.

The crew of Intrepid includes three Marinites — Doug Best of Belvedere and Bob Norman and Steve Taft of Mill Valley.

Courageous, with an 8-4 record in the preliminary and observation trials, damaged a metal fitting — the backstay craine — near the top of its mast as it prepared in high winds for the trial competition.

The race on Rhode Island Sound was postponed for 24 hours.

The aluminum Courageous leads the fight to oust the Intrepid and become the U.S. entryin the Sept. 10 America's Cup racing series.

The postponement followed the collision Thursday between Intrepid and the Valiant.

The New York Yacht Club's racing committee officially ruled that Intrepid had not hailed properly for the right of way before its stern ripped a six-inch gash in Valiant's starboard side amidships.

Valiant had actually defeated Intrepid by 28 seconds following the collision. But the outcome was under dispute temporarily because the skippers of both yachts filed protests about the accident.

Bargaining Today In Grid Strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — National Football League owners and the players union buckled down today to weekend bargaining sessions in an effort to settle their 20-day strike.

Federal mediator James Scearce called the two sides together for Saturday talks to settle a dispute which threatens the opening of the pre-season exhibition season only eight days away.

The players and owners were closeted with Scearce for 4½ hours yesterday and the mediator apparently thought enough progress was made to summon both sides back to a Saturday meeting.

However, the negotiators for the players' union were obviously upset on receiving news that Atlanta player representative Ken Reaves had been abruptly traded to New Orleans while the talks were going on yesterday.

Reaves, who played in every game since the Falcons were established in 1966, was dealt along with guard Andy Maurer to the New Orleans Saints for guard Royce Smith and linebacker Dick Palmer.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL players association, said he learned while the talks were going on that Reaves had been peddled off.

"It's an outrageous attempt to intimidate the players who are on strike and members of our negotiating committee," Garvey exploded to newsmen. According to Garvey's report, Reaves, a star defensive back for the Falcons, was called aside from the picket line by Atlanta coach Norm Van Brocklin and told: "You're now with the New Orleans Saints."

The players' union is unbudging about a series of so-called "Freedom issue" demands.

The only overt development of yesterday's sessions was that both sides agreed with Scearce not to make any public comments about the strike situation.

Raider Rookie Is Hospitalized

X-rays were negative, but Westherly will be hospitalized for several days, a spokesman said.

Marin Nines Succumb In Babe Ruth

SONOMA — West Side of Santa Rosa capitalized on 11 errors by Southern Marin American to coast to a 16-7 win, and Sonoma defeated Novato American, 7-2, in winners' bracket games of the District 9 Babe Ruth tournament for 13-year-olds yesterday at Arnold Park.

West Side scored five times in each of the first three innings to notch its second tourney win without a loss. Rick DeGeorgis kept Sonoma undefeated with a three hit pitching performance. He also went two for three.

Action continues today with losers' bracket games. Southern Marin National met Novato National at 11 a.m., followed by San Anselmo vs. Southern Marin American at 2 p.m. and San Rafael vs. Novato American at 5 p.m.

GIANTS WIN, 6-2

Caldwell's Fears Eased By Strong Mound Job

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — About a month ago Mike Caldwell was scared to death.

His left elbow sore as it could be and facing the possibility that he might not pitch again this year, Caldwell was about as low as a pitcher can get.

But he persevered and today he's back in the groove again, and seemingly so are the San Francisco Giants.

Last night, Caldwell, with help from Randy Moffitt over the final 1 2-3 innings, pitched the Giants to a 6-2 victory over the Montreal Expos. That gave the little southpaw with the big curve a 9-3 record but more than that, it restored his confidence.

"The arm feels fine now," said Caldwell. "Both the doctor and I are sure now I won't have to have surgery in the offseason. That's the real good news as far as I'm concerned."

Caldwell got all the help he needed from red-hot Gary Matthews last night: Matthews, on a .429 tear since the first of the month, rapped out three singles, drove in four runs and scored one as the Giants won their third straight — the first winning streak of note for the team since April.

Matthews, the 1973 Rookie of the Year who got off to a poor start in 1974, credits batting tips from coach Hank Sauer for his improved hitting.

"If Hank wasn't around to help me," said Matthews, "maybe I wouldn't be around either. He restored my confidence. I like his positive attitude. To Hank there isn't a bad hitter on our club."

Manager Wes Westrum, 9-10 since replacing Charlie Fox, said he feels the Giants finally have straightened themselves out.

"The pitching seems all right now," said Westrum, "especially with Caldwell able to take his turn. Also, Matthews has been a big pickup man since I got here. Heck, you can't hardly hit any better than he has. When you get pitching like Caldwell can provide and a guy like Matthews hits, you have to start winning some ball games. Our goal now is to get to .500 someway."

The Giants are still nine games below that so-called magic figure but that's not all that important. They obviously aren't going anywhere this year but Westrum would like to lay the groundwork now for 1975. He doesn't say so in so many words but all his moves seem to be designed with that in mind.

Mike Torrez, who was 6-1 lifetime over the Giants, was touched for five hits and five runs in five innings last night and suffered his sixth loss in 15 decisions. Moffitt, meanwhile, picked up his 14th save.

TO LITTLE LEAGUE FINAL

Hamilton, Twin Cities Advance

Willie Wiitala's two-run triple broke a 3-3 tie in the top of the seventh inning to give Twin Cities a 6-4 victory over Novato American last night at Fairfax in the semi-final round of the Marin Little League team tournament.

In the other semi-final game at Larkspur, Craig Collins belted a two-run homer in the second inning to lead Hamilton-Loma Verde to a 6-3 win over San Rafael American.

Twin Cities was to meet Hamilton-Loma Verde for the championship today at 3 p.m. in Marinwood, with yesterday's losers playing at 1 p.m. for third place.

Winning pitchers yesterday were Kent Hanson for Twin Cities and Peyt Steiner for Hamilton-Loma Verde. Both went the distance.

The team tournament will be followed next week by the county all-star tournament, the first leg of a nationwide schedule that finished with the Little League World Series in Williamsport, Pa. Seventeen all-star teams will battle for the right to represent Marin in advanced rounds.

San Rafael In Senior Finals Vs. Marinwood

Gary Dunn doubled home one run and scored the other to back up Jay Hook's five-hit pitching and give San Rafael a 2-0 victory over Hamilton in the Senior Little League all-star tournament last night at Albert Park.

The win advanced San Rafael to today's final round against Marinwood, the only undefeated team in the double-elimination tourney. San Rafael must win two games, Marinwood only one for the championship.

San Rafael's runs came in the fourth inning when Dunn doubled to score Dave Nichols and then came home on a squeeze bunt by Shawn Kinney.

MURRAY OLDERMAN

Jackson, North Reach A Detente

THE TIPOFF:

The closer he comes to getting his face bashed in by George Foreman in far-off Africa, the more frenzied will become Muhammad Ali's promotional pitch. I wouldn't be surprised if the fight never comes off.

Q. Since their fight in Detroit, do Reggie Jackson and Bill North of the Oakland Athletics communicate? Did their hostility have anything to do with their collision in the outfield? — William Davis, Oakland, Calif.

Sensing that Jackson's pouting was hurting his performance, and ergo hurting the A's, North took the initiative and huddled with Reggie before a game in Boston to reach a detente. Since then, they even kid each other during batting practice. But friends? "Hey," says North, "we don't want to be friends." Their on-field accident, in which North was shaken up, was due only to the superhustle of each player going after a fly ball.

Q. I would like to know the history of baseball's "Game of the Week" on television, dating from the earliest broadcast to the present setup that includes Curt Gowdy and Tony Kubek. — S.L.W., Reidsville, N.C.

Baseball's Game of the Week telecasts started in 1965 on the ABC network with your friendly neighborhood roaster, Howard Cosell, as the play-by-play man. ("And a lousy one he was, too," says a baseball executive.) The late Jackie Robinson was his mike partner, with Leo Durocher doing occasional turns. A year later, NBC outbid its rival for the series and has held it ever since. Curt Gowdy has been NBC's anchor man on play-by-play right from the start. Peewee Reese worked with him for three seasons, and now Tony Kubek is in his eighth season. Last year they did a record number of 41 national telecasts (26 on Saturday, 15 on Monday) and will duplicate that figure in '74. The NBC contract runs out after '75. Oh yes, the network's first choice to work with Gowdy back in '66 was Ted Williams, but he said nix.

Q. With a rapidly increasing interest in hockey at all levels, especially college, why couldn't at least the finals in college hockey be nationally televised? At Michigan Tech University we have a deep interest in college hockey and I definitely believe it would draw much more than the typical demolition derby, gymnastics and motorcycle racing shows repeatedly telecast on "Wid World of Sports. Please comment. — John Beauparlant, Houghton, Mich.

You want to get something done, better write to Chuck Howard at ABC Sports in New York. I'm sure sooner or later they'll get around to college hockey. The tube has gotten around to everything else.

Q. It's easy to see why the Giants have flopped this year when they use a defensive lineup with Steve Ontiveros, Gary Thomasson, Dave Kingman and Ed Goodson on the field at the same time. Let's see how bright you are? What have they all got in common? — Peter Hamilton, San Rafael, Calif.

PARTING SHOT:

If the WFL makes it through the season, and there's hardly any question about that, Mexico City is definitely set for a '75 franchise.

Frontrunners Confident In Women's Open Golf

Combined AP & UPI

CHICAGO — Confidence is the keynote today for a trio of frontrunners — Carol Mann, Kathy Ahern and amateur Debbie Massey — heading into the third round of the National Women's Open with par scores of 144 for 36 holes.

It was the first time as many as three players shared the lead midway through the prestigious women's event. Each of the three declared flatly she thought she was on the way to victory.

Miss Massey, a 23-year-old playing in the opening day 68 and then slipped to a 76 yesterday, said "Putting was the difference and I didn't really putt badly. They just wouldn't go in and I lipped out quite a few."

Golf

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Curtis Sifford came thorugh with a four-under-par 67 and established a one-stroke lead after the second round of the $150,000 B.C. Open Golf Tournament.

Joe Lis gave Bosman all the runs he needed in the third when the designated hitter belted his second homer of the season following a single by McCraw.

The Indians chased loser Dave Hamilton in the fourth when Ellis singled and scored on Buddy Bell's double. Bell took third on the throw to the plate and scored on McCraw's infield out.

It took two great plays by the Indians' infield to help Bosman preserve his no-hitter. Shortstop Frank Duffy went deep into the hole to throw out Joe Rudi in the fifth and Bell made a diving stop at third and tossed out Bert Campaneris in the seventh.

Burial Today For Baseball Great Dean

WIGGINS, Miss. (UPI) — Funeral services were scheduled in this tiny Mississippi lumber town this morning for Dizzy Dean, one of baseball's most popular and colorful folk heroes.

The son of an itinerant cotton picker, Dean blazed his way into the record books with an awesome fast ball that earned him 30 regular season and two World Series victories in leading the St. Louis Cardinals' "Gas House Gang" to the World championship in 1934.

Dean, 64, who lived the last decade of his life in rural South Mississippi died Wednesday of a heart attack he suffered in Reno, Nev., last Sunday.

Dean, inducted into the baseball Hall of Fame in 1953, was to be buried in a cemetery in the Bond community near his home.

Final Inning Heroics Give Tiant No. 14

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

But one of his top fans—Boston manager Darrell Johnson—wasn't around to see it.

Johnson was awarded an early exit in the eighth inning by umpire Bill Haller for putting up what Haller considered too strong a beef on a ball Johnston thought was foul but was turned into an inning ending double play by Texas.

That decision could have cost Boston some runs and those runs might have come in handy if Tiant had not struck out pinch-hitter Tom Grieve and catcher Duke Sims in the bottom of the ninth with the bases loaded.

Those strikeouts preserved Boston's 3-1 win over Texas and the Red Sox' one game lead over Baltimore in the tight race for the American League East's top spot.

WHITE SOX 7 BREWERS 3

Ken Henderson homered, doubled and singled to drive in three runs in powering the White Sox to their fifth straight win.

ORIOLES 5 ANGELS 4

Don Baylor belted his fifth homer in the bottom of the 10th to break up a 4-4 tie and enable the Orioles to keep one game back of the Red Sox in the AL east.

ROYALS 5 YANKEES 4

Amos Otis smacked a three-run homer and John Mayberry followed with a solo shot in the fifth inning to account for the first four KC runs that provided Bruce Dal Canton with his fifth win in nine decisions.

TWINS 7 TIGERS 5

Larry Hisle's two run double in the fifth inning brought the Twins from a one-run deficit to victory.

ASTROS 5 CARDS 1

Lee May drove in three runs with a homer and a single as Houston sent the Cardinals to their seventh successive defeat. The Astros got all the runs they needed, three, in the first inning on a single by Roger Metzger, a double by Cesar Cedeno and the homer by May. Singles by Metzger, Cedeno, Bob Watson and May produced the last two runs in the eighth.

PIRATES 2 BRAVES 0

Ken Brett and Dave Giusti combined for a five-hitter and Brett also drove in the first Pittsburgh run. The victory raised Brett's record to 12-6, gave the Pirates back-to-back shutouts for the first time in more than a year and was their sixth victory in a row.

Hank Aaron played in his 3,033rd game for the Braves, tying Ty Cobb's major league record. No athlete in any professional team sport has played more games.

METS 4 PADRES 2

The Mets took advantage of an error by San Diego second baseman Horace Clarke to score four unearned runs in the sixth. Jon Matlack, who pitched a five-hitter for the victory, had singled and Bud Harrelson walked before Clarke booted Rusty Staub's two-out grounder. Matlack scored on the error, Ed Kranepool singled home the second run and, after an intentional walk to John Milner, Jerry Grote singled home two more runs.

REDS 4 CUBS 1

George Foster singled home two runs in the fourth and baseman walked and scored the last run in the seventh for Cincinnati. Pedro Borbon registered his 12th save by pitching four innings of two-hit relief after Jack Billingham was knocked out.

DODGERS 4 PHILLIES 0

Jimmy Wynn's two singles drove in two runs and Doug Rau and Mike Marshall combined on a three-hitter for Los Angeles. Marshall, making his 64th appearance in the Dodgers' 95th game, pitched the final two innings.

Gaters' Late Uprising Subdues Boston, 28-25

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Golden Gaters, down six games in the midst of the men's doubles, avoided the point that would have beaten them and rallied to defeat the Boston Lobsters 28-25 last night in World Team Tennis.

It was 17-15 Lobsters after three matches and Raz Ried and Roger Taylor built up a 5-1 lead in men's doubles.

A 6-1 Lobster win would have clinched the victory but Dick Bohrnstedt and Frew McMillan won the next four points, avoided four more set points and went on to win 7-5 and tie the score.

McMillan and Ilana Kloss then won the final mixed doubles 6-3 over Trish Bostrom and Stephan Walboy to give the Gaters the decision.

Early matches saw the Gaters' Lesley Hunt topple fellow Aussie Kerry Melville 7-5, Reid take Bohrnsted 6-4, and Janet Newberry and Miss Bostrum down Hunt-Loss 6-4.

49ers Practice Minus Jackson

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers were to hold their first full scrimmage today, without the services of their No. 1 draft choice, Alabama running back Wilbur Jackson.

Jackson had a cast removed from his ankle yesterday and trainer Chuck Karpata said he would not be able to practice until next week.

DRAMA REVIEW

College of Marin Gives A Convincing 'Crucible'

By GERALD GENESE

It's not often that the theatergoes can sit engrossed for three hours without fidgeting or wanting to get up and have a cigarette or refreshments or just to stretch his legs.

But that is what happened last night when the College of Marin staged a very powerful production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," directed by H.J. Susser.

"The Crucible," was Miller's protest of the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy's witch hunts in the early 1950s, when Communists were thought to be lurking around every corner of the Republic. Many lives were ruined unjustifiably (as we later found out) during this hysterical period in our history.

Miller set his play in another hysterical period — Salem, Mass. in the 1690s scend of the infamous witch trials. He purposely took us away from the dilemas of the 50s to give us some objectivity about the dynamics of the McCarthy Era.

"The Crucible," evolves around a group of young Salem girls who are involved in witchcraft — conjuring and visions of the devil. The girls are led by Abigail Williams (Christiane McKenna) who begins accusing various people in the community of being in concert with the devil. Her ulterior motive is to trap Elizabeth Proctor (Bette Besuner) in this web, so she will be executed. With Mrs. Proctor out of the way, Abigail can marry Elizabeth's husband, John Proctor (John McDill), with whom she has had one indiscreet moment which she mistakes for love.

Abigail's modus operandi is the scatter shot theory — shoot everyone in sight and eventually you will hit your target. And in the ensuing hysteria no one will question the original motive.

What Elizabeth doesn't bargain for is that John Proctor gets caught in the web she has spun and is executed, defeating her purpose.

Proctor, the central character in this tragic story, is powerfully, subtley and at times sensitively played by McDill. He and Giles Corey (David Faw) are the only men in Salem who see through the sham and say the emperor has no clothes. They pay dearly for their honesty — with death.

In the final scene when McDill is being forced to confess his association with the devil, he is asked to sign a confession, but at the last moment he gathers enough strength to refuse. When asked why he won't sign his name, he replies in what seems to be words wrenched from his soul, "Because it is MY NAME."

Bette Monica Besuner as Elizabeth Proctor and Christiane McKenna as Abigail are excellent as the essences of good and evil. Miss Besuner gives an extremely well balanced and controlled performance, and Miss McKenna never allows her character to become shrill or unpleasant, although she is called upon to shout a great deal.

In the role of the judge at the trials, which one might expect an older man to play, Tim Shippey displays a great deal of authority for a young man, and gives a nice portrayal of a man who does not see the evil in his actions. He always does the most expedient thing always in the name of God and for the public good.

Mark Schwartz as the guilt-ridden Rev. Samuel Parris, David Faw as the strong and honest Giles Corey, and William Walsh as the often-confused and vascillating Rev. John Hale, an are extremely good.

In the small but vital part of Tituba, the black slave girl who aids and abets the girls of Salem, Beverly Broadfoot is funny, brightening and powerful.

The remainder of the cast, and it is a large one, also is very good.

Once again, Susser has a great technical staff to rely on. About a third of the proscenium stage was used and a platform was built at the foot of the stage to bring the play closer to the audience. The set, although not elaborate, is extremely effective because it does not interfere with the action. The costumes by Pat Lusk are simple but authentic, and Edward K. Schoon's lighting of the show is marvelous.

This is a very heavy play and not the usual bill of fare one would expect at a summer theater. But the production is so powerful, briskly paced, crystal clear in intent and execution and splendidly acted, that it would be advisable for any serious or semiserious theater goer to see it.

"The Crucible," runs tonight at 8 o'clock and July 26 and 27 at the Fine Arts Building Theater on the campus.

MUSIC REVIEW

Opera Presentation Lacks In Subtlety

By MARTIN FRICK

The Inverness Music Festival resumed its weekend series of July concerts last night with a concert-narrative performance of Handel's magic opera, "Alcina" in Del Mar School in Tiburon.

The libretto, adapted from Ariosto's "Orlando Furioso" concerns a sorceress, Alcina who seduces travelers to her enchanted island before turning them into rocks, waves and animals. She falls in love genuinely with her current victim, Ruggiero, who, under her spell, is also in love with her.

On the scene comes Ruggiero's fiancee, Bradamante, searching for him. Disguised as a man, she catches the eye of Alcina's sister, Morgana. Eventually, all is uncovered, and Ruggiero breaks free from Alcina to destroy her and the island and to turn all rocks, trees and animals back into people.

Musically, without the recitative pieces, the opera is mainly a string of da capo arias without the relief of duets. Only at the beginning and end are there choruses, and one glorious trioe near the end draws the action together.

Harpsichordist-conductor Donald Pippin tried to keep things going at a lively pace with his witty, succinct narrations, leading the audience dramatically into each aria, but there was very little ensemble play among the singers themselves.

Also, the voice qualities were uneven for Handel. The purest voice was that of Theodore Weiss as Bradamante's elderly tutor, Melisso, to whom Handel gave just one aria. But Weiss also provided a good anchor in the three choruses.

Most appreciated by the audience was mezzo-soprano Stephanie Friedman who was given the role of Ruggiero, originally written for a castrato. Her warm, mellow voice was at its best in the haunting aria "Verdi prati" in which Handel displays his understanding of the human heart.

As Alcina, soprano Sylvia Davis possessed all the assurance and understanding of the music and the character — beautifully drawn by Handel. But only in the final pianissimo bars of the famous aria "Ah, mio cor," was her voice pure enough for Baroque trills to be distinguished from more unfocused sounds.

Natasha Kimmell and Francesca Howe were pleasantly adequate as Bradamante and Morgana. Tenor Allen Boney, Alcina's commander-in-chief Oronte, showed the least understanding of the style, pushing for volume at the expense of subtlety and control.

Tam's Drama Workshop To Open Play On Wednesday

The Tamalpais High School summer drama workshop will present "Ring Around Elizabeth," a three-act comedy-drama, next Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Curtain time will be 7:30 p.m. in the Ruby Scott Auditorium on the high school campus.

The play, by Charl Armstrong, concerns a mother who has been overwhelmed by the needs and desires of her family. In order to regain her freedom, she feigns amnesia, a device which enables her to tell the family members the truth about themselves.

Featured in the title role is Pat Quimby and the role of Ralph, her husband, is played by Jaime Blake.

Other characters are played by Vanessa Lehrer, Cassandra Politzer, Penny Jones, Chipper Massie, Debbie Warren, Jennifer Enos, Phil Coyle, Lori Fong, Gene Clark and Seth Barrish.

Each evening the play will be preceded by curtain-raiser performance of a one-act play. On Wednesday and Friday the play will be "High Window," a mystery melodrama and on Thursday and Saturday, a farce called "Nobody Sleeps."

Rod Miller will direct the first play and Jaime Blake and Gene Clark codirect "Nobody Sleeps."

Probation Given For Brawling

A 19-year-old Fairfax youth, one of two participants in a March 6 post-election brawl with former town administrator, Robert E. Crowe, has escaped a jail sentence.

Kenneth Mark Davidson was placed on nine months' probation Wednesday after pleading no contest in Marin Superior Court to a misdemeanor charge of disturbing the peace.

A Marin Superior Court jury acquitted Crowe last month of assault with a deadly weapon, though the former administrator admitted during the trial that he hit Davidson in the back with a double-bladed ax. Crowe was fired shortly after the incident.

Fairfax Council Draws Line On Employees' Pay Hike Requests

By NELS JOHNSON

Fairfax town employees, seeking salary increases of up to 15 per cent, were offered half that much last night by a council negotiating committee.

But councilmen Jean-Marie Mahoney and Albert E. Gately pledged to discuss with council colleagues a counter-proposal by employee representatives for a "bare minimum" 8.2 per cent salary hike, as well as fringe benefit boosts.

The council met in open session in the Fairfax Women's Club to hear salary and fringe benefit requests by representatives of fire, police and miscellaneous personnel. Councilmen quickly dashed hopes by police and miscellaneous employees for a 15 per cent wage boost, and by firemen for a 12.5 per cent salary hike.

"Everybody wishes we could give a lot. But we can't," said Mrs. Mahoney.

The council committee essentially offered all rank and file employees a 7.5 per cent pay boost and a 2.5 per cent fringe benefit boost. Top police officers and firemen were offered a 5 per cent pay hike, as well as a 2.5 per cent fringe benefit boost.

Councilmen said the offers would require expenditure of all of the $43,000 raised by the recent hike in local assessed valuation.

Frank O'Connell, manager of the Association of Public Employees who appeared last night to represent police and miscellaneous personnel, balked at the offer.

O'Connell, calling the matter a "question of priorities," then proposed that all police and miscellaneous personnel receive an 8.2 per cent pay hike immediately and an additional 2 per cent boost on January 1. He also asked councilmen to give policemen a $25 increase in their uniform allowance, and $45 per month in health benefits. Miscellaneous employees deserve full family medical coverage, he added.

In addition, the town should pay employees twice monthly rather than only once monthly, he said.

O'Connell suggested that the city delay hiring a town administrator for several months to provide funds to cover the pay hikes. Councilmen pledged to consider the proposal.

Fireman Steve Warner, representing the fireman's association, won tentative approval from the committee for full medical coverage for fire personnel, eventual reduction in the work week to 56 hours, and a paid medical examination for firemen every two years.

He also asked for an 8.2 per cent salary increase and urged councilmen to lift a requirement that firemen live within two miles of city limits.

Firemen prefer to live "north of Novato" where it is less expensive, according to Warner.

The council committee was expected to bring employee demands to colleagues at a meeting today in the Fairfax Women's Club.

Prison Reports Shows Quentin Still Remains A Trouble Spot

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California prisons have experienced a "rather gratifying decline" in violence but San Quentin still remains a trouble spot, the state Department of Corrections said yesterday.

A report prepared for state prison boss Raymond K. Procunier showed stabbings and fatal knifings have dropped overall during the last seven months compared to the same period in 1972-73.

But at San Quentin and the Deuel Vocational Institution at Tracy, the number of stabbings jumped. Both prisons are classified as medium to close security and are used to house "unpredictable" and "volatile" felons, said Philip D. Guthrie, assistant director of the Department of Corrections.

"Far from being discouraged, we are cautiously encouraged," Guthrie said in an interview. "We had a rather substantial increase in the prison population but still had a decrease in violence," he said.

The staff report on California's prisons was undertaken to determine the effect of recent measures to curb the upward spiral in the violence that has plagued the institutions.

It showed that from Dec. 1, 1972, to July 1973 there were 118 stabbings in the prison system. That figure dropped to 98 from Dec. 1, 1973, through the end of June this year.

Fatal stabbings were down from 17 to 9.

Guthrie termed the drop "rather gratifying" particularly in light of an increase in the prison population from 16,470 to 21,256 during the period studied.

The report showed, however, stabbings increased from 29 to 36 at San Quentin while the number of inmates jumped from 1,842 to 2,236.

At Deuel, stabbings went up from 23 to 35.

Because of the problem, Procunier ordered increased violence control measures this year with tighter watch over sources of possible weapons and more security for some groups of inmates.

The study showed that among the general population of prisoners — those on the "mainline" — stabbings declined from 105 to 52 while those in maximum security increased from 13 to 46.

"The kind of weapons used changed greatly from the heavy category of expertly fashioned daggers of flat metal out of industry and maintenance areas toward makeshift weapons contrived of razor blades, sharpened plastic or wooden instruments," the report stated.

It said the percentage of stabbings linked to prison gangs went down from 58.5 per cent to 38.8 per cent.

At Soledad, once notorious for its violence, stabbings declined from 25 with four fatals to six and one fatal.

Guthrie said all the other prisons maintained a low level of violence or experienced a reduction as the result of the efforts to curb the problem.

Silvestri Rejected On Fee Rebate

George J. Silvestri Jr., an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination to Marin's Ninth Assembly district seat, has been turned down in his request for a refund of his $211 filing fee.

The rejection was received yesterday in a letter from the office of Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. it said the law does not permit such refunds.

Silvestri had requested the rebate on the basis of a recent state Supreme Court ruling that "the filing fee system . . . violates the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution and is in all repsects null and void."

The ruling was in the case of Donovan V. Brown and centered on the question of pauper's filing fees.

Silvestri, a deputy county counsel in for Marin, told Brown he would consider filing a class action suit if the refund was not made.

Sausalito Looks At New Budget

The Sausalito City Council yesterday concluded review of a $2,440,934 budget proposed for 1974-75 without making any cuts or additions.

The budget, up $428,636 over this year's spending program, will require a tax rate of $1.405 per $100 of assessed valuation, down eight cents from this year's rate. The city can cut the tax rate and still obtain more revenue than last year because of a 6.8 per cent hike in assessed valuation.

Yesterday the council reviewed a $771,392 allocation for the public works department, up from this year's $661,949 account.

City Mgr. Thomas P. McKensie McKenzie said the budget will come up for adoption at 8 p.m. Tuesday in city hall.

He said Councilman Violeta Autumn yesterday voiced concerns about increased funding for the public works, police and fire accounts. In a flurry of memos, Mrs. Autumn said police and fire accounts, up a total of $231,516 over this year, are "too high," but offered no specific plan for reductions, according to the city manager.

Mrs. Autumn also issued a memo urging creation of a five-member budget commission, saying she needed help in evaluating the fiscal plan, McKenzie said.

Sentencing Set On Stolen Airline Tickets

A former employee of SFO Helicopter Airlines is to be sentenced Aug. 1 in Marin Superior Court on a charge he concealed stolen property — airline tickets stolen from the Sausalito heliport.

Paul Calder Strong Jr., 23, of San Francisco, pleaded guilty to the felony charge just before a scheduled preliminary hearing Thursday before Municipal Judge Gary W. Thomas.

Strong earlier had told Marin Sheriff's deputies he bought some 100 tickets from someone else and used part of them for free travel.

Arrest Made In Burglary Probe

Novato police arrested a San Anselmo man on suspicion of burglary after he was caught inside the Novato Lumber Co. building on Highway 101 near Atherton Avenue at 8:24 p.m. yesterday.

Booked into Marin County Jail was Donald MacLane, 36, of 60 Redhill Avenue. He remained in custody today. No bail has been set and he is to appear in Marin Municipal Court on Monday.

Officers reported they trapped Lane after answering a burglar alarm summons.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Reynaud's Phenomenon Victim Controls Finger Temperatures

A 31-year-old victim of Raynaud's phenomenon (a circulatory disorder) recently demonstrated the importance of mind over matter. He has been able to increase the flow fo blood into his fingers by combining hypnosis and operanting techniques. For the more than seven months he has done this it has worked.

Sufferers of Raynaud's usually develop bluish or white fingers which feel numb and cold whenever they are exposed to the cold or they become emotionally upset. Warmth and relaxation bring relief. The skin gets cold and discolored when the small arteries clamp down and shut off the circulation. When the tissues warm up, the vessels relax and open up. Between these attacks, the fingers look and feel normal.

SEVERAL BOSTON psychiatrists were consulted by this 31-year-old man. During the past three years, he had had attacks of coldness, accompanied by blueness and tingling of all his fingers. The symptoms were brought on by exposure to the cold, smoking, and especially anxiety. One of his aunts had Raynaud's and this worried him because she lost the tips of some of her fingers.

When the usual treatment failed, he requested hypnosis, even though tests showed that he was not a good subject. During the first hypnotic spell (which failed), he was told to imagine sunbathing on a warm day. Then he was taught autohypnosis and asked to create his own images. When this method failed, he was instruct ed to relax via self-hypnosis The physicians told him to try to increase his hand temperature by whatever method he thought most feasible.

A SENSITIVE feedback device which gave off an audible signal when finger temperature increased was attached. Within 15 minutes, the finger temperature went up 8 degrees Fahrenheit (3.9 to 4.3 Centigrade). In time, he learned that concentrating on increasing the sound emitted by the feedback device created a feeling of warmth in his fingers. Ultimately, he mastered the technique and now is able to control the circulation to his fingers.

SPIDER VEINS

V. J. writes: What causes broken veins in the legs? I am 15 years old and never had these unsightly things before. Someone told me it was due to stretching exercises in gym. Is this true?

REPLY

No. As a rule, no cause can be found.

MOLDY BREAD

A. E. writes: My sister eats moldy bread because she says it is a source of natural penicillin. Is this true or is it bad for her?

REPLY

Penicillin is a specific mold and needs a special culture medium. If any grew in moldy bread, the amount would be infinitesimal. Aside from the esthetic factor, moldy bread is not harmful, but there is a remote possiblity that a harmless mold might become active. Furthermore, eating molds may aggravate other internal fungal conditions. All in all, the parctice is not recommended.

Purchase Of New Buses Due Study

Purchase of up to 30 more new buses will be considered by the Golden Gate Bridge District's transportation committee at 10 a.m. Tuesday in toll plaza offices.

The district has an option (that expires next month) to buy the extra coaches in addition to the 32 to be delivered in October.

The committee also will consider staff proposals to expand bus service in Sonoma County.

The finance-auditing committee will meet at 10 a.m. Thursday, in toll plaza offices, and the full board of directors at 10 a.m. Friday in the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors chambers, Santa Rosa.

Supervisors Hold Key To Drug Squad

In an unusual move, a regional agency has agreed to let Marin County supervisors decide the fate of San Rafael's proposed narcotics squad.

The North Bay Regional Criminal Justice Planning Council on Thursday made final approval of the project subject to resolution of differences within Marin.

Full endorsement by the regional agency, made up of representatives of four North Bay counties, is needed i. the San Rafael proposal is to receive $160,000 in federal law-and-order funds.

According to Raymond Grady, executive director of the council, the council felt local controversies should be resolved at the local level before funding is endorsed.

County supervisors earlier this month expressed concern that the new narcotics squad might be a reincarnation of the old county drug abuse bureau, phased out two years ago amid complaints that it was concentrating its efforts on marijuana users instead of dope traffickers.

The San Rafael squad would operate countywide under already signed agreements with various police departments and the county sheriff, and San Rafael deputy Police Chief Lawrence R. Kelly has promised that it would crack down on drug dealers and not users.

Grady said the council favors the proposal even though it, in effect, withheld funding pending a decision by county supervisors.

Bella H. Aaron, head of the county Criminal Justice Planning Department, who drafted the San Rafael proposal, had told supervisors the funding had already been approved and any delay caused by them would jeopardize it.

Mormon Scout Bias Is Bared

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (UPI) — A 12-year-old Boy Scout can't become a patrol leader in a Mormon troop because he is black, a state official has reported.

Don L. Cope, himself the state's first black ombudsman, said the Boy Scouts of America has been asked to investigate racial discrimination in a scouting program operated by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

"Since the boy cannot hold the priesthood, he cannot become a patrol leader," Cope said.

Mormon boys become deacons at the age of 12, but the church forbids blacks from becoming deacons, the lowest rank in the priesthood, which is held by all male members.

Sir Edmund Hillary, New Zealand explorer who was the first man to conquer Mt. Everest, was born July 20, 1919. This is the 49th birthday of actress Lola Albright.

Also on this day in history:

In 1859, American baseball fans were charged an admission fee for the first time as 1,500 spectators paid 50 cents each to see Brooklyn play New York.

In 1917, the first lottery draft of Americans for World War I duty was conducted in Washington.

In 1944, German dictator Adolf Hitler narrowly escaped death in a plot engineered by a group of high military and civil officials.

In 1945, the flag of the United States was raised over Berlin as the first American troops moved in to participate in the occupation government.

North Should Have Known To Never Compete Without Cards

It doesn't always pay to compete when the opponents threaten to play the hand at one of a suit. Even if you get past both opponents, there is still your partner to reckon with.

Opening lead — ♠ Q

AGAINST GRAIN

It goes against the grain to let the opponents play a hand at one heart. Perhaps South can afford to bid one spade if he has a very conservative partner.

In this case, however, North had the heart of a lion. This didn't help him at spades. The raise to two spades showed more courage than judgment.

South couldn't have respectable strength in high cards since he had failed to open the bidding. Nor could South have a strong spade suit since he had failed to overcall at his second turn. In short, South was obviously just trying to push the opponents up.

PROMPT PUNISHMENT

North was promptly punished for his bad raise. East could well afford to double since his hand was sharply limited by his early bidding. If West didn't like the double (for example, with a singleton or void in spades) he could take it out to diamonds or hearts.

As it happened, West was delighted with the double. What's more, he chose the best opening lead — a trump.

Declarer won in dummy with the ace of spades and managed to ruff one diamond in dummy. West then got in with the ace of clubs and led another trump to remove the last trump from dummy.

Now South had to scramble to bring in as many as six tricks. The penalty was 500 points, far more than the value of any part score.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer bids one diamond, your partner overcalls with one heart, and the next player bids one spade.

You hold:
♠ - A 9 3
♥ - J 5 3 2
♦ - 3
♣ - Q 7 5 3 2.

What do you way?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts. Your partner's overcall promises a respectable suit and reasonable strength. This hand is well worth a raise.

Religion On Rise In Soviet Union

By PAUL WOHL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Religious stirrings throughout the Soviet Union once again have the Kremlin worried.

In April at a trial in Dushanbe in the central Asian republic of Tadzhikistan, a Soviet official named Reiner was found to be an organizer of the local Baptist movement. He converted the young as well as the old and even managed to form a Baptist choir from local schoolchildren. With the help of a typewriter brought in from Switzerland, he published a whole series of religious writings.

The Muslims are stirring. In central Asia a sect which calls itself "Rebirth of Islam" has appeared, but because of their commitment to fostering friendship with the Arabs, the Soviet authorities have avoided a showdown. (While Reiner was sentenced to five years of hard labor for his Baptist activities, the restive young Muslim clergymen were only exiled to distant Muslim settlements.)

But what concerns the Soviets most is a religious revival within the Russian Orthodox Church — especially among the young.

In the small Church of the Miraculous Nikolai on the outskirts of Moscow, Rev. Dmitri Dudko, a veteran of the war and of Stalin's concentration camps, has held free-wheeling question-and-answer sessions about religion on Saturday evenings ever since last December. Western observers report that many attending in the last few months were in thier 20s.

Such active meetings could not continue unnoticed in the Soviet Union. Father Dudko encountered opposition from those attending the meetings and even from the church hierarchy.

Then on May 18 he suddenly announced his resignation from the clergy saying that he was forced out because "the illegal interference by the godless in the internal affairs of the church." As he left the church, he told his congregation: "I again appeal to you to stand by me. This is all I can do."

When Vladimir Maximov, the famous Soviet novelist, arrived in Paris in mid-March, he was asked by a correspondent of the emigre journal Posev if interest in religion among Russia's youth was merely a fad.

He replied: "In today's Russia, youth seeks God with a clean heart and an inquisitive mind. Many of them have paid with their lives for their faith."

The correspondent also asked Maximov whether the state's control of the church unfavorably influenced the clergy.

He replied: "The great majority of the priests are selfless and courageous and seek to strengthen the faith of their flock."

Maximov, who attended some of Father Dudko's talks while he was still in Moscow, was asked if there really were Marxists with the Soviet Union who had become Christians.

His reply: "Perhaps there are not yet so many, but they are becoming more and more. The religious movement is the most powerful social movement in Russia."

RELIGION IN AMERICA

Program Nearing End

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

At the end of the year, the World Council of Churches controversial "Programme to Combat Racism" will have completed its five year mandate to transform pious platitudes to action.

Ecumenical religious declarations condemning racism began in the western church as far back as 1924 with the publication of J. H. Oldham's "Christianity and the Race Problem."

But the transformation from declaration or confession to action or penance is another matter.

It was precisely to close that gap that the WCC established the Programme to Combat Racism.

In an analysis of the five-year history of the PCR, Elisabeth Adler, head of the Evangelical Academy in East Berlin, Germany, notes that the PCR came into being both because of a changed world — including such things as the civil rights movement in the United States and the liberation movements in southern Africa — and a changed World Council, where churches from the Third World, as the victims of racism, were becoming more influential.

Her analysis, entitled "A Small Beginning," is published by the WCC headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

"It was deemed imperative," Adler said of the 1969 Notting Hill, London consultation which resulted in the PCR, "that they (the churches) no longer concentrate attention on improving race relations at an individual level but on striving for racial justice and a new balance of power at the level of institutions."

It was precisely this kind of premise that led to the PCR's most controversial component —the Special Fund, which has distributed more than $1 million to groups working for "a redistribution of power."

The most widely debated grants, both within and without the church, went to the liberation movements of southern Africa.

Of the slightly more than $1 million granted so far, some $688,000 has gone to southern Africa organizations, particularly the liberation movements in Guinea-Bissau, Angola, Mozambique, Namibia, South Africa and Zimbabwe.

"The grants to liberation movements were a small step arross the line which has been drawn between charity, traditionally regarded as Christian, and solidarity, which had seldom been risked by the churches," Adler said.

"The WCC and the churches had always tried to avoid becoming identified with particular political aims or groups," she added. "But they had begun to learn that seemingly neutral positions had political significance, and that they had in fact been identified with oppressive structures."

At the same time, however, Adler said the WCC "should be modest about the impact of its action."

The grants did, she said, give at least symbolic solidarity with the oppressed, particularly because they were given "without strings" and the WCC exercised no control on how they were spent except that they were not to be used for military purposes.

"The impact of the Programme to Combat Racism has not achieved anything by itself but in a modest way has strengthened the liberation forces and alerted the world's conscience.

"It has thus begun to correct the churches' complicity with racism and witnessed to Christ as Lord of All," she added.

In the United States, PCR grants have gone to such groups as Malcolm X Liberation University, Southern Election Fund, Inc., the Free Southern Theatre, the United Farm Workers and the American Indian Movement.

The PCR has perhaps had less impact in the United States than it has had elsewhere — but as church people debate both the donation of funds to the Programme and the strategies of the groups receiving grants it has served as a means of raising the ongoing problem of racism, a problem still begging for a solution.

He has served as pastor in his native Switzerland and as a missionary in Africa. He will soon begin graduate study at Southwestern Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, Tex.

Mill Valley Church Has A New Pastor

Pastor David P. Kast has accepted the post as new pastor of the Mill Valley Assembly of God.

He will be officially installed July 28 at the church by Pastor William O. Vickery, secretary-treasurer of the Northern California and Nevada District of the Assemblies of God.

Kast is the son of Swiss missionaries to Africa, where he was born and raised. He came to America in 1960 for studies at Bethany Bible College in Santa Cruz, where he met his future wife Gretchen, the daughter of American missionaries to West Africa.

Immediately following their graduation, they were married and returned to Africa together as missionaries to the tiny nation of Lesotho — known as Basutoland prior to its independence in 1967.

The Kasts were called upon for a variety of chores, including preaching, construction, teaching, and extracting teeth.

Kast founded and served as principal of a mission high school which, combined with two elementary schools under his direction, had an enrollment of over 400 students.

Kast is presently doing graduate work at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Strawberry, where he is student body president.

The film was directed by Michael Hooser, a 26-year-old film maker who uses multiple images and juxtapositions of new material with sections of films of Billy Graham and the movie "Barabbas".

Its theme is the awakening from disillusionment of witchcraft, drugs, and violent protest into a new life.

MARIN LIVING

SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1974

A Bit Of Denmark In Marin County

By DOROTHY GARDINER

The separation is great in miles, but not in spirit.

For 53 years both Old Glory and Denmark's red and white standard have flown above the retirement center that is nestled against a gently sloping hillside east of Grand Avenue and bounded by Mission and Belle avenues.

Today 92 men and women live in a complex of contemporary redwood, brick and glass apartment units, stroll or putter in flower and tree studded gardens, dine three times a day from Danish china in a large, but home-like, dining room overlooking Mount Tamalpais and gather at will in social halls to talk, sew, play cards, games and billiards.

ALL THE BUILDINGS are named for Denmark's royal palaces and photographs of Denmark's Royal family members who have visited the home during American tours line the walls of the Administration Building.

Aldersly was founded in 1921 in the White House, an elegant Victorian mansion that still stands beneath a spreading magnolia tree in the center of the complex.

(Today the building's first floor has been converted into a warm, sun-filled parlor and a large combination exercise and recreation hall where the men play billiards.)

Funds used to purchase the San Rafael property were left over from the local Danish colony's exhibition at San Francisco's 1915 Panama Pacific International Exposition, explained Mrs. Gerda Humphreys of Tiburon, a Danish-born seven-year member of the home's volunteer board of directors.

ADDITIONAL FUNDS, she said, had been earmarked for a statue of Denmark's fairytale author Hans Christian Andersen for Golden Gate Park that was never erected.

Sitting in Aldersly Administrator Margaret Callahan's office, Mrs. Humphreys, who came to this country following her 1960 marriage in Iran to a Standard Oil executive, talked of the home's past and of the Danish people's arrival in California.

The first wave of immigrants, she said, came in 1864 on the heels of a Prussian war that saw parts of Denmark ceded to Prussia and Austria.

These immigrants "were very social-minded," she continued, and in 1870 built the first Danish old people's home in San Francisco.

DANES, SHE SAID, are independent and proud and traditionally take care of their elderly.

In 1923 and 1924 Aldersly began to grow as two mansions adjacent to the White House were taken over for the home. In the 1930s a red brick building, that today has an antique-filled social hall on the first floor and rooms for residents upstairs, was erected by Robert Minor, a Danish-born sea captain who made a fortune in trade.

During the last decade and a half, a complex of brick and redwood apartment units, the Administration Building and dining hall have gone up around the original buildings.

From the beginning Aldersly has been supported by members of Northern California's large Danish colony, according to Mrs. Humphreys. Today some 500 give at least $5 a year for the home's maintenance, with many willing bequests to the home.

MANY OF THE residents also will the home funds and furnishings that are either used to decorate the social halls or loaned to new arrivals in need of furniture for their apartments.

In another interview, sprightly 90-year-old Mrs. Carrie Meyer, who moved from Oakland to Aldersly 11 years ago, recalled that her late first husband, Nick Andersen, helped found Aldersly 53 years ago.

She said a group of wealthy Danes realized that working people raising families "could never save enough money to retire."

Aldersly was the result. The first year there were 30 residents, she remembered, who "grew their own vegetables, made tablecloths and napkins, and raised chickens and meat."

MRS. MEYER, WHO says "I'm very happy here," has made 320 potholders for the home during her 11-year stay.

Today Aldersly is managed by a 21-member board of directors headed by Einer F. Jorgensen, a tall and strapping property agent for the State of California who resides in Santa Rosa.

Born in San Francisco, the son of Danish immigrants, he lived in Denmark for a year at age 10 and grew up in a Bay Area Danish colony he remembers as numbering 10,000.

Before working men received sick and social welfare benefits from their employers, he said, their needs were taken care of by local Danish clubs and lodges. That work is still going on at Aldersly where Jorgensen's mother died 10 years ago.

DIRECTORS ARE invited to serve on the board and then elected for three-year terms, according to Mrs. Humphreys.

Besides their official duties managing the home's operation and finances, directors find time to get to know the residents on a first name basis.

Aldersly's administrator, Mrs. Callahan and her assistant, Mrs. Elinor O'Brien, who says she's "a Swede who married an Irishman," oversee a staff of 37 housecleaners, waitresses, kitchen helpers, cooks, nurses, housemothers and maintenance men.

Although most of the residents are Danish-born or of Danish descent, there are also a number of persons of non-

THIS MARKER designating Aldersly's distance from Denmark was erected 53 years ago when the retirement home was founded in a Victorian mansion north of San Rafael's Mission Avenue. The symbol at the top stands for King Christian X, Denmark's then ruling monarch.

ALDERSLY RETIREMENT HOME residents turn out to watch the raising of both the Stars and Stripes and the red and white Danish standard above the Danish retirement home in the heart of San Rafael. Both flags have flown in the winds above the retirement center since its founding in 1921 by members of a socially progressive Danish colony concerned about the care of their elderly. Rob Menzies Learned His Herb Lessons As A Boy, And Now He Teaches Others

By DON KEOWN

As a boy growing up in Marin County in the early 1950s, Rob Menzies used to take long walks with his grandfather who would point out to him and teach him the distinctive qualities of the various wild plants growing along their paths.

That grandfather was the late Robert Menzies, patriarch of a pioneer Marin family that resided as next-door neighbors to the Robert Dollars in San Rafael.

The elder Menzies was a successful business man. But he was also an ardent horticulturist with a special interest in herbs.

It was he who gave the madrone tree its name.

THE IMPRESSION which Robert Menzies made those 20 years ago upon his small grandson was a lasting one ("a great deal of what I saw then stuck with me," he says), and is reflected today in the 27-year-old Rob Menzies' profession of herbalist and his involvement as one of the founding-partners of the Star Herb Company, operating at 352 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley, and growing rapidly.

Born in San Francisco, reared in Marin, young Menzies attended Marin Country Day School and the Army-Navy Military Acaddemy at Carlsbad, Calif. His college education was interrupted for Air Force service, but he returned to school and earned a liberal arts degree in 1971 from the University of Pacific in Stockton.

Those walks and talks with his grandfather, sometimes close to the Menzies home, sometimes at such places as Bear Valley and along the slopes of Mount Tamalpais, largely had determined the direction of Rob's studies.

SURVIVAL TRAINING courses and experiences while in the Air Force reinforced his interest in and appreciation of botany and its vital relationship to mankind.

UNICORN ROOT or star root is one of the 600-plus herbs handled by Star Herb Company, Mill Valley. Coming from the southern United States, it is popular as a food flavoring.

And at the University of the Pacfic, he took advantage of the opportunities offered by the farms in the Stockton area to enhance his knowledge of plant life.

At Pacific, too, he found a sound, flourishing school of pharmacy, and often exchanged information and ideas with friends who were pharmacy students.

ONE OF THESE pharmacy students, Bob Janis, joined him as a partner when the Star Herb Company was founded in 1972.

The third founder, Stephen Fleming, was also a University of Pacific graduate, and a managerial consultant.

"Thus," says Menzies, "we all had something to contribute — Steve's business background, Bob's pharmaceutical training, my knowledge of herbs."

The Star Herb Company began as one of the shops in the varied collection inside The Port on Mill Valley's Miller Avenue, and then, as it outgrew those quarters, moved across the street to a building formerly occupied by a crafts shop.

STAR HERB IS in the process of buying that building, and currently shares its space with Maxine Collins'

An Herb Company, Planted In Marin, Thrives And Grows

MARIN LIVING

Country Flowers, a shop specializing in dried floral creations.

Star Herb has also acquired warehouse space in the Northgate Industrial Center, San Rafael, in its efforts to keep pace with a growth rate that even its founders did not anticipate.

"We will be doing an annual gross business of a million dollars by the end of our third year," Menzies says. "At least that is our target. And the way things are going, we'll make it."

Star Herb Company imports and both wholesales (to health food and herb stores) and retails herbs, spices and teas. It conducts a mail order business. It holds classes in "historical herbology" on its premises. And it maintains a small and separate library-bookstore of books and literature dealing directly or indirectly with herbs.

"THERE ARE ONLY three of us doing anything like this in all of Northern California," claims Menzies.

What Star Herb Company very definitely does not do, Menzies stresses, is to prescribe or recommend herbs for illnesses or for other reasons of health.

Here, he admits, he is touching on what is for him a sore point. For he claims Star Herb Company, and others engaged in the business, have been subjected to attempts at entrapment by food and drug inspectors.

Those efforts, he claims, have come, not from employees of federal agencies, but from State Department of Public Health personnel.

HE TELLS OF two specific attempts at such entrapment. In one instance, the visitors were two men, one of them carrying a poorly concealed tape recorder. In the other case, the visitor was a woman "who tried and tried to goad us into suggesting something for her alleged ailment," before finally, having failed, admitting that she was a state inspector.

"We have to keep reiterating that we are only a food store, not a pharmacy or medical outlet, and that we are not there to serve any medical purpose," Menzies says.

"Even though we have a trained pharmacist (Janis) at the front counter, he can only use his professional knowledge to discuss the properties of the various herbs, and must be very careful not to make any statement that could be interpreted as prescribing.

"IT REALLY BORDERS on the ridiculous."

For Menzies is under no illusions as to the purpose for which many of the customers come to Star Herb Company.

"While there are many who buy herbs for their food properties, others are there seeking alternatives to the traditional medicine that has not helped them with their problems," Menzies says. "And even though, from hard study and considerable professional experience, we might be able to suggest something, we can't offer them that help."

Menzies stresses that he has no objection to government regulation of drugs, herbs and other plants.

"IN FACT, I think it is necessary," he says. "There is no question but that there has ben exploitation and quackery on the part of some who have sought to profit from the current interest in natural foods and medicines. And others have simply been carried away by their enthusiasm and have made exaggerated claims."

"But," he adds, "I think that those who apply those controls should be qualified to exercise their responsibilities fairly and competently.

"Too often they proceed without sufficient knowledge to really make a wise determination. Indeed, sometimes that knowledge is simply unavailable."

What is needed, he suggests, is more research to decide the true potentialities of herbs and other plants as medicines and foods, rather than blanket condemnations.

NOT ENOUGH OF that research is being done now, Menzies says. And when it is undertaken, it is often by pharmaceutical companies "that are more interested in developing synthetic substitutes than in evaluating the natural substances."

"I think the agencies should also be at least as concerned about the effects of these synthetics as they are with the regulation of the raw products," Menzies says. "And I think there should be more horticulture and botany taught in the schools, beginning in the grades, and that science classes should get out into the field more."

Menzies notes, with approval, that there is already a trend in that direction in a number of schools.

THE CLASSES MENZIES teaches in the classroom at Star Herb Company include both beginner (six-week) and advanced (12-week) courses in historical herbology.

Menzies currently has classes meeting Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, 7 to 10 p.m. Each class is limited to 30 students. His principal textbook is the best-selling "Back to Eden" by Jethro Kloss.

"We also do field walks on weekends in Marin County in which we stress the identification of the edible wild herbs and other plants," he says.

MENZIES HAS ALSO lectured at colleges and before organizations.

The three founders of Star Herb Company all devote their full time to the enterprise. In October of 1973 the company was merged with the older Parrott and Co. and incorporated, with Menzies continuing as the head of Star Herb.

The store is open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily, except Sunday.

Customers, says Menzies, range from octogenarians in search of herbs that their own grandmothers once used in pioneer America, or in the "old countries," to a 7-year-old who comes in regularly to buy peppermint leaves that she prefers to chewing gum.

THE GROWTH OF the company has reached the point where there are now four employees in addition to the three founders of the company.

And, for all the sources that have been developed, Star Herb Cojmpany still has problems, Menzies admits, in keeping up with the demand for some of the more popular herbs such as ginseng.

The trading of herbs represents one of the oldest commercial ventures practiced by man, Menzies notes.

FOR STAR HERB Company, the stock ranges from exotic plants harvested in Africa, China, Korea, South America and other faraway places, to herbs that are grown locally in Marin County.

"We carry some 600 individual items that qualify as herbs and spices, or are related to them," Menzies says.

From "faraway places" come such herbs as the ginseng of Korea, yerba mate from South America, guarana from South America, hibiscus flowers from Mexico, snakeroot from Thailand, tumeric fingers from Thailand, African bird pepper or cayenne from Africa.

ALONGSIDE THESE exotic items at Star Herb can be found the likes of rosemary, rose petals, mint, yerba buena (called "the good herb"), rose hips, hawthorn berries, yellow dock root and yerba santa, picked and properly dried by local growers, then brought to the store, either to be traded for other herbs, or sold at their market value.

Right now, Menzies says, the keenest interest among purchasers of herbs seems to be in ginseng, fo-ti and godukola, all reputed to have longevity and strong heart and healthy stomach properties, but sold pointedly without any such endorsement at Star Herb.

Ginseng, says Menzies, is "very, very expensive," especially since so much of it is imported from the Orient.

YET, IRONICALLY, IT can be grown quite successfully in this country. Herbalists are trying to get American growers and customers "turned on" to the domestic ginseng that is being grown more and more from Wisconsin and New York down into Tennessee and Virginia.

There is also a considerable amount of good quality ginseng growing wild in this country, Menzies says.

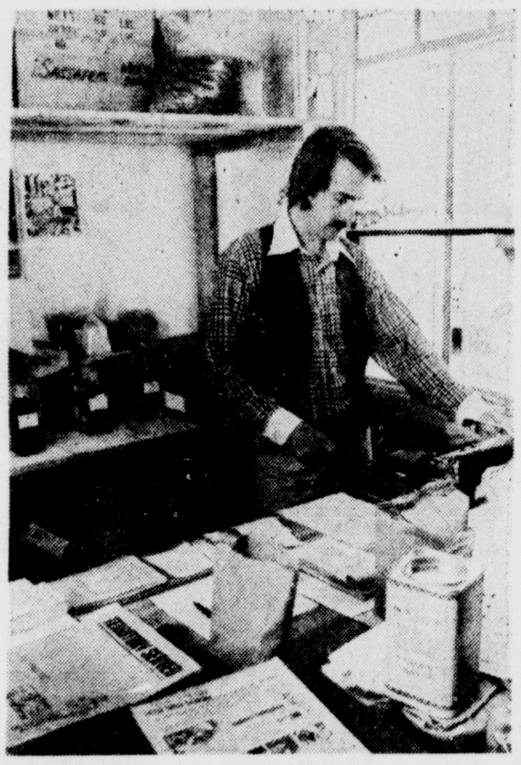
"In fact," he adds, "there is an incredible amount of wild, edible food to be taken for the finding in this country. That is because we have so much open space, comparatively speaking, still left."

THIS IS ESPECIALLY true of Northern California, he continues, and he sees it as a sad misfortune that residents of this region do not take greater advantage of the herbal and fruit bounty that is available to them in the wilds.

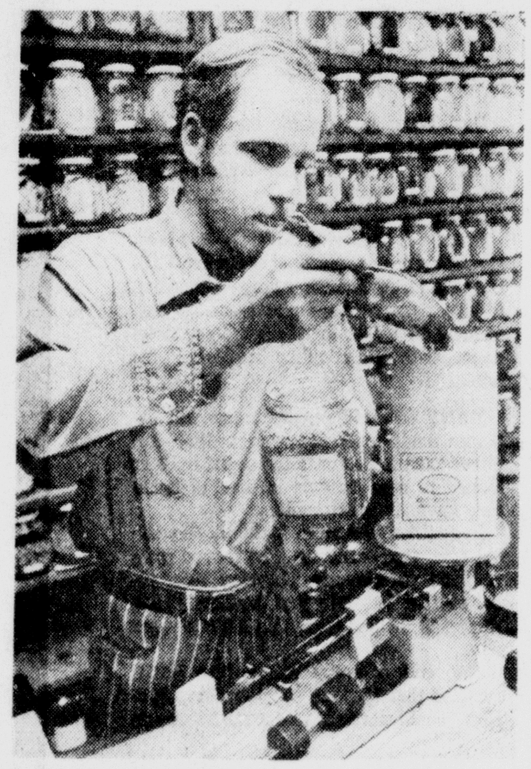
"I'm convinced that people who work with plants generate a special spirit," he says, "and it's the kind of spirit or feeling from which we can all benefit. There's a feeling of enrichment, of something very basic, of something that seems to open up the soul to the marvelous possibilities that exist upon this planet if we live our lives fully and in harmony with nature."

THE WALLS OF the Star Herb Company building at 352 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley, are lined with shelves holding bottle after bottle containing herbs, some of them imported from distant places, some of them grown and harvested right here in Marin County. Bob Janis, right, a pharmacist, waits on customer Mickey Collins, while herbalist Rob Menzies is behind the counter at left. Star Herb Company is both a wholesaler and retailer of herbs.

THE HERB FOR which there is currently the greatest market demand, says Rob Menzies, herbalist, is the ginseng. Here he is showing Korean white ginseng. But there is also a domestic variety of ginseng grown in the United States that is of high quality.



CONTRIBUTING HIS business training and experience to the Star Herb Company as one of the three founders is Stephen Fleming, University of Pacific graduate who was engaged in managerial consultation before joining two college friends in launching the new firm.



A GRADUATE PHARMACIST from the University of Pacific at Stockton, Bob Janis is generally the man-behind-the-counter who greets customers at the Star Herb Company. Here he scoops an herb from its glass jar container into a paper bag for a waiting customer.

THE HERBALIST AMONG the three young men who founded Star Herb Company is Rob Menzies, who grew up in Marin County and learned about herbs from his grandfather. What we disdain as a weed, he points out here, is often useful herb treasured by other cultures.

Aldersly Residents Retain Their Zest For The Good Life

Danish background who have come to the home with husbands and wives.

RECENTLY ALDERSLY has started accepting other persons who are interested in or enjoy Danish culture, according to Mrs. Humphreys.

After all, she said a person who likes spaghetti would not enjoy the home's Danish-American cuisine that a smiling Mrs. O'Brien says features potatoes at every meal.

Applicants are required to furnish the board with financial and physicians' reports, according to Mrs. Callahan.

The home provides 24-hour medical care in its infirmary and has a physician available who sees patients on the premises at no extra charge.

PATIENTS ARE sent to outside hospitals only when the infirmary's equipment will not tend to their needs.

Residents pay a minimum entrance fee of $6,000 for a garden apartment and $300 a month for services including three meals a day, housecleaning, linens, infirmary and nursing care.

All apartments come equipped with an intercom system. When a resident fails to appear for a meal without notice, the staff immediately checks on his or her well-being.

The garden apartments — that most of the residents furnish themselves — range from a one-room studio model with a dressing room and large bath to a big, two-room model, available at a higher fee, that has a bedroom large enough for twin beds, a dressing room, bath, large living room, fully equipped kitchen and eating area.

Birthdays are celebrated over special foods, Danish "festive cakes" and presents. The average age at the home is 81 with many of the residents well into their 90s.

(The Danes are known for their longevity, noted Mrs. Callahan, saying "there's a lot to be said for the Scandinavian heritage, way of life and traditions . . . they do nothing to excess.")

MARIN LIVING

Many of the residents gather together at 3 p.m. daily for coffee and Danish pastry in their apartments or social halls.

EVERY SEPTEMBER the residents host a fund-raising picnic on the grounds. Waitresses dress in Danish peasant costume, and favorite Danish foods and beer are available.

EVEN THE fire engine red mailbox at Aldersly is marked in Danish for the many residents of Danish birth and descent who live at the San Rafael retirement home.

But according to Mrs. Christine Lorentzen, 95, a native of Denmark who came to San Francisco in 1895, life itself at Aldersly is a party.

In the evenings, the energetic former dressmaker plays cards with her friends and enjoys "sandwiches, cocktails or beer."

It's these activities, along with giving recitations at parties and writing articles for a Danish newspaper, she says, that keep her brain active, and obviously keep her energetic and well.

TWO OF ALDERSLY'S younger residents, both strikingly handsome and youthful, are also enjoying life at the San Rafael home.

Evelyn Andahl, 66, a retired nurse from Ross General Hospital, who maintains a charming heirloom-filled studio apartment and thriving garden outside her front door, says she's found her first two years at Aldersly "all pluses."

Born of Norwegian parents in Brooklyn, New York (the family moved to Marin when she was 12), she says she feels at home in the Scandinavian surroundings that she describes as "close . . . more family life and relaxed.

She's amused when passersby stop as she works in her garden facing Mission Avenue, admire her apartment, and ask the manager's name.

"I KNEW THE first time I visited here that I belonged," she beamed.

"I'm happy I'm here," agreed Mrs. Frieda Rasmussen, 69, a German who moved to Denmark following the First World War.

Following her marriage to a Dane in 1922, the couple came to California where her late husband went into the contracting business in Vallejo.

Mrs. Rasmussen, a long-time member of Danish lodges who says she feels more Danish than German, drives her own car and enjoys the freedom at Aldersly — no restrictions.

Aldersly, with its blazing flower gardens, its happy and friendly residents, and its outgoing cheerful staff, is a pleasant place, indeed.

WEARING THE DANISH costumes used for holidays and parties at Aldersly Retirement Home, waitresses Debbie Welch, pouring, left, and Sandy Murphy, right, offer an afternoon beer to a group of Aldersly residents. Seated around the table in the carpeted dining room are Axel Larsen, 63, a retired San Francisco fireboat captain, left; Mr. and Mrs. Jens M. Larsen, center, a couple from Los Angeles; Martin Rasmussen, 89, an Aldersly resident since 1949; Mrs. Christine Lorentzen, 95, and Mrs. Gerda Nielsen, 87, who came from Denmark with her parents in 1907.

WHEN MRS. ANN Knudsen, 78, left, told the Aldersly Retirement Home staff she was interested in flowers and gardening, this greenhouse was erected. There she spends every morning tending her plants. Mrs. Elvera Hansen, 78, whose late husband was a Humboldt County dairy rancher, admires Mrs. Knudsen's fuchsia. The whole Aldersly complex has a garden-like atmosphere with an abundance of growing and flowering things.

STOPPING IN San Rafael to check on operations at Aldersly Retirement Home, Einer F. Jorgensen of Santa Rosa, president of the volunteer board of directors, goes over paper work with Administrator Margaret Callahan, right, and her assistant Mrs. Elinor O'Brien. From the beginning the home has been supported by members of Northern California's large Danish colony with some 500 today giving at least $5 a year for the home's maintenance.

MANY ALDERSLY RESIDENTS credit active social lives with keeping them young and alert. Here in the antique filled social hall in the Minor Building, Jens Hansen, 77, left; Mrs. Carrie Meyer, 90, center; Mrs. Anna Bockmann, 80, and John Sorensen, 82, play a hand of bridge while Mrs. Sophia Merian, 90, and Fred Bockmann, 82, rear, watch.

MRS. MARGIT BAKKE, 80, right, entertains Mrs. Christine Lorentzen, 95, in her elegantly furnished two-room apartment at Aldersly. The unit also has a large bedroom, a balcony overlooking Mount Tamalpais, dressing room, bath, fully equipped kitchen and dining area. Mrs. Bakke, a Norwegian who came to this country more than 60 years ago, has been an Aldersly resident 10 years.

THEIR 15-YEAR PROJECT of turning the backyard weed patch into a showplace garden at their Santa Venetia home at 142 Mabry Way finally completed, Ted and Patricia Dotto can sit back and relax. Only minimum maintenance is required now, and in the background, Mrs. Dotto's father, retired nurseryman Leo Galli, and two of the Dottos' three children, Doreen and Danny, are taking care of that. Dotto's father, Alexander Dotto of San Anselmo, built the redwood wheelbarrow planter. Prominent shrubs include a Dracina Palm and a bronze Alberta Spruce.

THE GARDEN BUILT BY THE DOTTOS

When the Ted Dottos moved into the house at 142 Mabry Way, Santa Venetia, 16 years ago, the large backyard, 60 feet wide, 80 feet deep, "was just one big weed patch."

Previous occupants, says Patricia Dotto, "had never planted one plant."

Today that yard is a Santa Venetia showplace, a garden of flowers, shrubs, trees, statuary, groundcovers, rockwork and redwood planters. There is also a concrete patio, and a curved aggregate walkway, plus fencing.

It is the result of a long-term development of the yard that the Dottos and their three children, Danny, 15, Doreen, 13 and Ronnie, 12, are now able to simply sit back and enjoy. Only watering and other minimum maintenance is required now.

It all began, the Dottos say, with drawing sketches and plans. There they had the invaluable help of Mrs. Dotto's father, Leo Galli of San Anselmo, a nurseryman, now retired, who continued to lend them his professional expertise.

"For the first five years, we didn't do anything," says Dotto. Then the project began with the installation of the walkway and patio.

Over the next 10 years, the garden was developed, a section at a time. With the completion of each section, a back fence was set back to make room for the next big push.

A major chore for Dotto involved the application of the crushed rock that covers much of the total area. "First I had to weed the area," Dotto says. "Then I had to dig out two inches of dirt to make the bed. Then we brought in the rock."

The excavated dirt was used for two planting mounds on either side of the walkway, and to fill redwood planters built by Dotto. Redwood separators for the rock beds were also built by Dotto.

In selecting plantings, the Dottos have provided a contrast in foliage colors and textures, plus bountiful flower color.

Perhaps the best part of the whole thing is the satisfaction Ted and Patricia Dotto derive from knowing that they did the whole thing themselves, with only family help.

LOOKING FROM THE patio toward the back fence, you get this view of the Dotto garden. The large tree is a willow. Ted Dotto built the two mounds on either side of the curving walkway with dirt excavated for the rock beds. He built, too, the octagon-shaped redwood planter in the foreground, in which is growing a lacy cut-leaf maple that grows very slowly to about four feet.

THE CENTER PART of the spacious Dotto garden looks like this. The ceramic dwarf was made by Ted Dotto's sister, Carol Nichelini of San Anselmo. Also to be seen in this photograph is another Dracina Palm; two Deodar Cedars, one green, the other variegated; a gray Colorado spruce and the big willow tree. And an extensive use of gravel and rock to reduce maintenance work.

THE TRAVEL PAGE

By STEPHEN McNAMEE

For Montreal and Canada, May 12, 1970, was an historic date. It was on this day that the International Olympic Committee awarded the 1976 Summer Games to Quebec's metropolis.

Since then, the tremendously complex problems of preparing for the games have involved thousands of people throughout the country and abroad. In Montreal, tangible signs of the Olympics can already be seen.

WORK ON THE main sports site, a few minutes by Metro from the heart of the city, is well under way.

The first major step involved the excavation of two and a half million cubic yards to allow for the construction of the main stadium, the Velodrome. The Velodrome was to be ready this August when the World Cycling Championships, both amateur and professional, will be held in Montreal, the first time this major event has taken place outside Europe. A strike, however, has made that unlikely.

Despite spiraling inflation, plans to make the Montreal Olympics a self-financing venture are still on schedule.

"It's difficult to predict the future," Olympic Commissioner General Roger Rousseau said recently, "but as of today we are still within our 310 million dollar guideline. That's amazing when you consider inflation of 10 per cent last year against a prediction of 7 per cent, and when you consider construction costs have soared 30 per cent. We are probably the only venture anywhere that has stayed within its budget."

THE MOST STRIKING feature of the main sports site will be the stadium.

Designed to seat 70,000 spectators for the games, it will be elliptical in shape, with a 550-foot mast containing 15 floors to be used for a variety of indoor sports. Outside elevators will take visitors to the top of the mast where there will be an observation tower and restaurant.

Most of the competitions will be held in Montreal or the immediate region. Of particular interest to the millions who fondly remember Expo '67, the rowing basin, now under construction at a cost of $2,900,000, will be located on Ile-Notre-Dame in the St. Lawrence River which, with Ile Sainte-Helene, was the site of the great international exhibition.

THE SAILING competitions will take place in Kingston, Ontario, a distance of 185 miles from Montreal.

Kingston's Portsmouth Harbor will be developed as the Olympic Regatta Headquarters. Accommodation for the expected 1,900 team members, officials and associates will be provided in part at Queen's University, close to the proposed marina site on Lake Ontario.

Construction is also under way in Montreal on the Olympic Village. Located directly across from the sports center, it has been designed to house 8,500 athletes and officials.

The facilities will carry on after the Olympics. The stadium is designed so baseball and football can be played there, and the sight lines will be among the best in North America. The Velodrome will have a number of tennis courts inside the track. The Olympic Village will be used for housing.

MONTREAL COMBINES the best in cosmopolitan sophistication with the warmth of traditional French-Canadian hospitality, and for this reason it has always been a popular tourist destination. The city's popularity is an asset to the Olympic planners, who can count on the existing accommodations as well as numerous hotels now under construction to take care of the rush of visotors for the Olympics.

The city is served by 23 airlines, of which 20 are international, and there are 500 arrivals each day from all parts of the world. Within three years, the city will have a new airport capable of handling supersonic jetliners. Montreal will be three hours from Europe.

Two Canadian transcontinental railways also have headquarters in Montreal. Trains arrive daily in the heart of the city. A system of broad highways throughout Quebec makes the city easily accessible by car.

THE CITY'S METRO subway system is one of the finest in the world. There are three lines and 26 stations adorned with stained-glass, ceramic murals, tapestries and other works of art. The Metro is now undergoing major expansion with construction of 52 new stations progressing rapidly. The completed network will cover most of the city.

Montreal is also one of the world's ranking centers for television production, especially French language production, and an international broadcasting center. It was the relay point through which television coverage of the Tokyo Olympic Games was carried to Europe.

Montreal's technical excellence, however, has not detracted from its cultural life.

THE THREE-THEATER complex of Place des Arts is the setting for the best the world has to offer in the way of entertainment. Four other theaters in the city have from 2,000 to 2,500 seats. A conservatory of music and of dramatic art, dancing schools, a planetarium, an aquarium, a botanical garden with fine educational facilities and four universities (two English, two French) make Montreal a major center of learning.

The continuing exposition, "Man and His World," still attracts large numbers of visitors to the city every year.

Few cities have better facilities than Montreal for conventions and international meetings. Place Bonaventure has accommodation for 17,000 persons seated and can accommodate 8,000 at a banquet.

MONTREAL HAS another dimension, the underground city. Many of the hotels, business and shopping centers are linked by a system of underground walkways and tunnels.

All these factors, combined with the city's intangible elements, which some have described as "flair," "elan," or "joie de vivre," created in Montreal an ideal location for the 1976 Olympics.

Two Suggestions On How To Trim Vacation Costs

By RALPH HUBLEY

How about vacationing at home — somebody else's?

The home-exchange program is one of the fastest-growing developments in American vacationing.

It is also one of the more interesting ways to stretch your travel dollar by staying longer in one place at costs only a little above those of remaining at home.

OR, HOW ABOUT a low-cost college-campus vacation?

College facilities are available at modest cost — a fraction of commercial food and lodging prices — during popular vacation and holiday periods. In many instances they are obtainable the year round.

Of these two novel ways to cut vacation costs, home swapping has attractions beyond economy. Those who have taken part put establishment of lasting friendships high on the list. Not only is there the opportunity for friendly relations with those with whom you exchange homes but with your new "instant" neighbors too. They are usually more than willing to help you with your sightseeing plans.

And there are also "instant" playmates for the children.

Among the other advantages of home-exchange programs are having someone to care for your pets and plants and reducing the risk of being burglarized. Some house swappers have had such rewarding experiences in their temporary homes that they encourage everyone to take part.

However, the disadvantages should not be overlooked.

The house-exchange agencies through which you deal take no responsibility for damage that might occur to your home or for overstatement of facts about your temporary new home. The agencies simply put you in contact with others interested in exchanging homes, chiefly through listings and descriptions in brochures and pamphlets.

Then, after you see a listed home in a place you would like to visit, or if someone contacts you about your home, there is considerable correspondence necessary to secure all the details. For instance, there are insurance and utility bills to be considered. There may be other things like use of a car, trailer, boat, or bicycle during the stay. These arrangements should all be clearly worked out.

Adventures-in-Living, Box 278, Winnetka, Ill., 60093; Holiday Homes Exchange Bureau, Box 555, Grants, N. M., 87020; Vacations Exchange Club, Inc., 119 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10003; and Canadian Holiday Home Exchange, Box 8963, Ottawa, Ont.

If you are interested in visiting the British Isles, you may wish to order Home From Home magazine, which lists nearly 200 homes and estates with descriptions of 450 nearby British towns for touring. Write: Home From Home, 26 Lower Stone Street, Maidstone, Kent, England. The magazine costs $12.

As for college-campus vacations, "Mort's Guide to Low-Cost Vacations and Lodgings on College Campuses" describes the facilities of 145 colleges in the United States and Canada which, in the past, have been enjoyed mostly by students but now are open to travelers. The locations are in some of the most scenic and historic regions of America.

Here are some samples of typical trips and costs suggested in the book which may be purchased at bookstores for $4.50 or from the publisher (Mort's Guide, CMG Publications, Inc. Box 630, Princeton, N.J. 08540):

Explore New York City — $84 for one week for two. It includes lodging and breakfasts.

Seven Days in San Francisco — $87 for two. It comes complete with room and board.

Sight-seeing in Montreal — $123.80 for one week for four people. It includes lodging and breakfasts.

In its first report on international fuel costs, the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board recently listed the areas where the average cost per gallon of fuel more than doubled from July 1973 to February 1974. These included the U.S. mainland to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, the Caribbean, areas served by transatlantic operations, and destinations in the North, Central, and South Pacific.

The CAB also reported that fuel costs went up 60 per cent or more from the U.S. mainland to Hawaii and from the 48 states to and from Alaska, the Trust Territories, and to South and Central America.

Driving In Mexico Should Be Pleasure

Mexico is an exciting country with varied terrain ranging from colorful mountainous desert in the north to tropical rain forest in the south, and with temperate green plateaus in between.

It's also an easy country to reach for the California motorist, with Tijuana, Tecate and Mexicali as convenient border crossing points.

Red tape is minimal, reports the National Automobile Club, whether you plan a few hours across the border or a six-month-long driving expedition into the interior.

No documentation is necessary if your stay will be less than 72 hours, the National Automobile Club says. However, be sure to carry some proof of U.S. citizenship such as a birth certificate, baptismal certificate, valid U.S. passport or voters registration card. These will settle any questions that may arise at U.S. Customs when you re-enter the United States.

ANY MOTORIST driving beyond Ensenada and San Felipe in Baja California, or east of Mexicali, or anyone staying longer than 72 hours is required to have a Mexican Tourist Card, valid for six months, as well as an automobile permit.

There are two types of tourist cards available — both good for six months and issued free of charge: the single entry type and the multiple entry card which permits the holder to enter, leave and then re-enter Mexico. These cards are available at any Mexican consulate and Mexican tourist office in California as well as at Mexican Border Immigration Offices. Tourist cards are easily obtained upon presenting proof of U.S. citizenship.

Automobile permits — also free of charge — are available at Mexican Customs offices at ports of entry. Proof of ownership such as a vehicle registration card must be shown to obtain a Mexican automobile permit. If your registration lists a second party as legal owner (such as a bank or finance company) you must also have notarized written permission from the legal owner allowing you to drive the car in Mexico. This also applies if you are driving a rented car.

Mexican automobile insurance is vital to any motorist planning to drive south of the border. American automobile polices are not valid, once you cross the international line.

IF YOU ARE INVOLVED in an accident and have no Mexican insurance your car will be impounded and you are very likely to land in jail, whether the accident is your fault or not, until all accident claims are settled.

Insurance coverage — both short and long term — may be obtained from one of Mexico's largest and most reliable companies — Seguros La Provincial — by the general public at all 22 offices of the National Automobile Club in California.

The Mexico-bound motorist should make sure his policy includes at the very least property damage and public liability. Coverage for fire, theft, hail, lightening and hurricane damage, collision and upset, and medical payments for occupants of your car is also available in the Seguros La Provincial policies.

Bay Area NAC locations include San Jose, San Mateo, Salinas, Oakland and San Francisco.

MEXICAN REGULATIONS require that Mexican Customs officers examine your baggage at the international border. If you are traveling into the interior, your bags will be sealed by the officers to avoid additional inspections at customs sub-stations further south. Don't break these seals until you have passed the last inspection station.

Once you are in Mexico you will find the main highways well paved and well marked. However, be sure to have your car in good mechanical condition before starting your trip. Capable mechanics will be found in the larger cities. However, there are long stretches of highway where only limited service is available.

Take extra water with you for your radiator; you are likely to be driving at a high altitude, especially if you are heading for Mexico City, and water boils at lower temperatures at high elevations. Also, carry an extra fan belt and a spare tool kit.

Avoid driving after dark. Highways are not fenced and livestock often wander at will. Hitting a cow could ruin your entire day. Poor visibility and potholes on some roads are also night-time driving problems.

MANY MEXICAN roads have narrow one-way bridges. When two cars want to cross in opposite directions, the first driver to flash his headlights has the right of way.

Gasoline, oil and automotive supplies are available at government-owned Pemex gasoline stations. However, these stations may be scarce in rural areas such as in the center of Baja California, so it is wise to keep your gas tank filled.

Gasoline is sold by the liter — there are about four liters to the gallon — and as of the first of the year, is available in two grades instead of the three grades formerly sold.

Under the new grading system, Pemex Extra sold at the silver pump and rated at 94 octane is Mexico's best gasoline. Extra costs about 60 cents a gallon and is available in cities and at better stations along important highways. Pemex Nova, sold at the blue pump and rated at 81 octane is Mexico's "regular" gasoline which works well in lower compression engines. Nova costs about 42 cents a gallon.

PEMEX STATIONS do not accept U.S. gasoline credit cards, so be sure to have cash handy. U.S. dollars are generally accepted in border cities, but be sure to convert your dollars into pesos (the rate is 12.50 pesos to the dollar) if you plan to drive further into Mexico.

The Mexican Tourist Department operates a Tourist Patrol Service, the "Green Angels," which cruises major tourist routes from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily except Tuesday mornings. These green radio-equipped trucks are manned by two bilingual mechanics and will provide free information, towing, first aid and minor auto repairs in the event of an emergency.

BRAZIL'S AMAZING HEALER

What Happened In Congonhas Do Campo Wasn't To Be Believed, But Had To Be

IN THESE TWO PHOTOGRAPHS from John G. Fuller's book, "Arigo: Surgeon of the Rusty Knife," the Brazilian healer performs cataract surgery with an unsterilized knife and without anesthesia, and then, at right, comforts the woman patient after the operation. The photos are taken from frames in a motion picture made by a team of American doctors who went to Brazil to investigate the work of Arigo.

When on Jan. 11, 1971, near the small plateau village of Congonhas do Campo in Brazil, an untutored Brazilian by the name of Jose Pedro de Freitas met death in an automobile collision, medical science may have lost a golden opportunity to probe the mysterious world of psychic healing.

For the man who died was the amazing healer the world had come to know as Arigo.

At an estimated rate of 300 per day, patients of all classes, from many lands, suffering a multitude of maladies, many of them pronounced incurable by physicians, had visited his simple clinic, with results that were often astounding.

But although Arigo was willing to function openly, in the presence of professional observers, science and government had only begun to seek an understanding of the mysterious power that seemed to be creating an endless stream of miracles and near-miracles.

In fact, throughout most of the years he had practiced, never accepting a penny of recompense for his work, Arrigo had been subjected to persecution and prosecution by the medical establishment, by the church and by government.

John Fuller, much attracted to the bizarre as subject matter for his books, films and television productions, has told the story of this psychic healer in his book, "Arigo: Surgeon of the Rusty Knife." It is a story that makes clear the point that Arigo was no myth nor faker. There was something there that simply cannot be explained in terms employed in medicine today.

Arigo's own explanation of the almost incredible cures he affected, performing surgery with an unsterilized pocketknife or kitchen knife, or sometimes with the bare hand, prescribing medicines in unusual and seemingly illogical combinations that were nevertheless effective, after making almost instantaneous diagnoses, was that he was working while "possessed" by a long dead German doctor.

While really exhaustive medical research into Arigo's powers was only at the planning stage at the time of his death, fortunately some preliminary studies had been made by teams that visited Congonhas do Campo. There they witnessed Arigo's "flash" diagnoses, the swift scribbling of prescriptions and some relatively minor surgery performed with what seemed an utter disregard for the patients' flesh, yet produced no signs of pain and minimal bleeding. By then Arigo, under pressure from the medical society of the province, the church and the state, had abandoned the performance of major surgery, at least publicly. But the visitors talked to many who testified to such operations that had brought them or loved ones back from the brink of death or invalidism.

For his book John Fuller talked to many of these observers, in both the United States and Brazil, and viewed films some of them had taken.

One of them, Dr. Henry K. Puharich, formerly on the faculty of the New York University Medical Center, has written an "afterword" for the Fuller book. Dr. Puharich not only watched Arigo at work, but permitted the healer to operate upon him, removing with dispatch and without ill after-effects a lipoma from his arm.

Testimonials to Arigo's healings have come from the famous and prominent, such as former Brazilian President Juscilino Kubitschek and entertainer Roberto Carlos, from Brazilian doctors, a British consul, a Peace Corps member, American doctors and researchers, a Brazilian judge, and townpeople and peasants.

Fuller recreates the scenes of Arigo at work, seemingly in a trance, suddenly speaking with a German accent and using words from that language that he could not normally speak, roughly inserting the knife blade deep into the eye socket and twisting it, popping a lipoma from the flesh, scraping cataracts from the eyes, reeling off prescriptions seemingly without thought that combined the newest drugs with ancient herbs.

"The facts about Arigo exist. They have happened, simply and naturally. A commission of scientists, free from preconceived ideas, must study him, and study him thoroughly. We might be on the edge of discovering entirely new and extremely beneficial therapeutic resources." Dr. Oswaldo Conrado, cardiology specialist, as quoted in "Arigo: Surgeon of the Rusty Knife."

He gives the reader, too, a picture of Brazil that is essential to the understanding of the conditions under which Arigo worked. It is a country strongly Roman Catholic. And yet also a country with a strong strain of spiritism, some tracing back to the old African religious and beliefs, some to the teachings of the Frenchman Allen Kardec which have such strong appeal to Brazilian intellectuals. Ironically, while Arigo remained a strongly religious man, local church leaders disowned and fought him, while too vital. Besides he was the hope of thousands, perhaps millions of people who looked to him as the witness to higher powers . . ."

And then, after a 14-day fast, to weigh the meaning of Arigo in life and death: "I came to some strong personal conclusions. The first was that I had failed both Arigo and humanity by not completing my studies of Arigo's healing work. I now realized that I should have dropped my other work in 1963 and concentrated all my efforts on him. I was sure there would never be another Arigo in my lifetime. But if there was, I would not fail next time."

The reader of John Fuller's fascinating book must also reach the conclusion that skepticism, conservatism and jealousies prevented mankind from realizing the values for humanity that might have come from from an all-out study of the Brazilian healer's strange powers. No easy explanations were possible, but the truth might very well have been worth the immense effort necessary for bringing it forth.

But they weren't his only "believers."

H. V. Walter, the British consul, put it this way: "He was absolutely the most wonderful phenomenon of modern times. You see, hardly anyone thought of going to him until every doctor he knew had given him up. That's where Arigo's value cam in, and why his cures were so dramatic . . . I don't go in for any of the mystical stuff. I'm a pragmatist, a realist. What happened in Arigo's case, happened. It's not to be believed — but it has to be."

And Dr. Puharich in his afterword puts it bluntly in telling how he received the word of Arigo's death:

"I sat back in my chair. It was not possible for Arigo, the greatest healer in the world, to be dead! He was too young,

The Historic 50-Mile March That Moved A President, A Congress And Nation

Nine years ago 300 men and women braved an incredulous and openly hostile southern populace to march the historic 50 miles from Selma to Montgomery, Ala., securing by one of America's most dramatic grass roots actions the passage of the historic Voting Rights Act of 1965.

In a well-researched, objective narrative, author Charles Fager recalls vividly the events leading up to and surrounding that five-day march, both to recreate a portrait of the political base of Dallas County and to assure that this would not, as has so much of the Black-American's history, "slip from memory."

The author is a veteran of the Selma demonstrations in early 1965, but even though he was a worker with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and was later arrested three times in the ensuing demonstrations, he admirably shuts off his own emotional involvement to give the reader a fair and incredibly extensive report of that epoch in the civil rights movement.

But his undertaking was too difficult. He has at once tried to background the political in-fighting between segregationist law enforcement officers, to capture the deep-rooted relationships between Black and White Selmans and yet to describe cohesively an explosive chain of events that thrust President Lyndon B. Johnson before Congress and the nation, crusading impassionately for the passage of the voting rights bill.

Fager chose tight, descriptive dialogue and mixed it with a mountain of facts and background, but he lost something in this journalistic narrative just by the sheer magnitude and complexity of the pre-march events.

The reader who wants to understand the workings and plans of both the white segregationists and moderates, and of King and his followers, almost has to take notes as a multitude of names appear and reappear throughout the book.

The reader learns about Dallas County Sheriff James Clark, a steadfast segregationist who believed in no-nonsense law enforcement, and his mentor, Circuit Judge James Hare, who issued the first injunction prohibiting mass meetings directly affecting King's first arrival in Selma. Hare was also a strict segregationist who held the belief that civil rights organizations were tools of "Communist conspiracies" and who also believed the Blacks of Dallas County were ancestors of a Nigerian tribe of a "distinctly limited, inferior stock."

On the other side of the political picture was a new municipal administration in Selma led by Mayor Joe T. Smitherman and Wilson Baker, his public safety director, an office conjured up to wrest away Clark's control within the city limits. (Baker is now sheriff of Dallas County.) These two men plotted a "meet non-violence with non-violence" course of action with King, mainly, as Fager points out, to avoid any violence that could detract from Smitherman's bid to lure new industry to Selma.

In this section, too, the reader also learns that for the Black community, its show of defiance marked the first and most intense local coalition that Selma had ever seen.

But, Fager continues, all were caught up in a situation that Blacks and Whites had perpetuated themselves — on one side it was the Blacks' inability and apparent unwillingness to challenge their subordination, and there was also the ability of the White population to ignore the injustice of their segregated system.

From there the reader soon gets overwhelmed by words and deeds, what with all the restraining orders, marches to the registrar's office, police hostility and violence and the power-play between the two factions of white leadership. But it does set the scene for the tensions that accompanied the final march, and the rush to search for bombs under each bridge, along Highway 80. It is here too that Fager describes the killings of Jimmie Lee Jackson, the white Unitarian minister James Reeb and later, the murder of white civil rights worker Viola Liuzzo.

This is the climax, the collapse of decorum and the explosion of tempers — a highly emotional section that marks the end for the "meet non-violence with non-violence" tactic.

The march, of course, is the most interesting part of the book, not only because of its historical importance, but because it embodies the drama and comraderie that was so much a part of the civil rights movement. It's a well-written section that points out the dedication of the marchers as well as the workers, including a group from the San Francisco Theological Seminary.

After the march, Fager returns to the political scene. This time the reader is ready for it, anxious to take in the postscripts of how the march really affected the newly aggressive Black community. And even, after proving themselves a viable voting force by helping to elect Baker and defeat Clark, it still took seven years before Blacks themselves held municipal seats in Selma.

Should Aggression Be Expressed Or Suppressed?

In a world lamed by wars and shocked by violence, the very word "aggression" is one that produces fears and guilts.

But Southern California psychotherapist Dr. George R. Bach is the developer of a theory that many of our present problems are traceable not to the exercise of our aggressive instincts, but rather to a suppression of those natural feelings, particularly in our early years, as enforced by parents, by schools, by laws or other adjuncts of society.

He and his colleague, Dr. Herb Goldberg, expound upon that theory in their book "Creative Aggression" that they have subtitled "The Art of Assertive Living."

The "nice guy" syndrome, they tell us, has produced a society of smilers behind whose pleasant facades there too often bubbles a boiling cauldron of repressed hostilities. When the pot boils over, tragedy occurs.

They cite a roster of mass murderers in support of their contention. All, they claim, were "nice boys" who grinned and bore the frustrations and disappointments of life — until they exploded into violence.

"As a major step toward protecting the community against sudden, unpredictable violence, it is first necessary to reject the traditional definition of the good neighbor," the psychotherapists write. "Typically, in our society this has meant the person who is always friendly, leaves others alone, never gets personal, is smiling and polite, clings to ceremony, and is always predictable in his 'nice' way.

"Our new model of a good neighbor who can make the community safe is one who will share his negative feelings and displeasure openly, who will criticize and confront as well as praise, who will level about what he really feels and will engage others freely in a give-and-take repartee of a negative as well as positive nature."

Drs. Bach and Goldberg make a strong presentation for their basic thesis. Yet one feels, uneasily, that he is seeing but one side of the coin. The two make it plain that they are not endorsing mindless or excessive aggression. They propose "creative" aggression. But once the individual gives free reign to his feelings, how is he to differentiate between creative and destructive aggressions? Can he be trusted, especially in time of stress, to make an accurate determination?

If repressed, "nice" people have been responsible for most of our terrible mass murders, one suspects that aggressive, belligerent people have caused the most of our individual killings (though not, by any means, all of them), and most probably have taken a much greater total toll of lives. And a case might well be made that "aggressive leadership" has been responsible for more wars than "repressed leadership," although here two psychiatrists might disagree in their diagnosis of the personality of the same leader, making positive proof impossible.

For those who choose the path proposed by Drs. Bach and Goldberg in directing their own lives, and even more importantly in rearing their children, they had best make very, very certain that the "creative aggression" they encourage or permit is, indeed, "creative."

Wine Pressings

by DAVE RAFFI

Prohibition proved to be one of the bleaker episodes in the history of the United States and a burgeoning American wine industry was almost wiped out by the Volstead National Prohibition Act of 1920. But human ingenuity will out, and many thirsty Americans were not content to go without wine just because it was illegal.

Certain entrepreneurs found very inventive methods of circumventing the law. Sales of medicinal wine tonic reached an all-time high as the public learned that refrigerating the tonic would cause the bitter medications to settle to the bottom leaving a palatable table wine.

The law also allowed wine to be sold for sacramental purposes. Much wine was produced for Jewish rabbis because a rabbi had only to present a list of members of his congregation in order to purchase wine. Since no one bothered to check on the legitimacy of these lists, some "congregations" were rather hastily assembled. One ambitious "rabbi" in San Francisco set up a "synagogue" in his hall bedroom which he named "Congregation L'Chayim" and from which he satisfied requests for port and sherry by his neighbors.

But my favorite story concerns the inventive New York grape grower who sold grape juice in 30 gallon oak casks. Every keg carried a label of warning to the purchaser — "Caution: do not add yeast or admit air or the contents of this keg will ferment and make wine."

After things got back to normal in 1933, the American wine industry was gradually rebuilt until today the United States is one of the world's leading wine producing nations. At THE VILLA WINE CELLAR we are proud to feature American wines at 2138 Fourth Street in San Rafael. 456-0566.

This Time Dylan And The Band Score Big With A New Album

By BRUCE MEYER

One of the big disappointments of this music year was the heavily publicized, long-awaited album by Bob Dylan and The Band, "Planet Waves."

Mostly because we had been expecting so very much, Dylan's tunes on the album seemed uninspired, the playing and singing adequate but hardly exciting.

"Planet Waves" came out as Dylan and The Band began their big tour of the U.S. that was as much a success as the album was a failure. Now there's an album that gives us that tour for keeps.

It's called "Before The Flood" (Asylum AB-201), a two-record set — and, like the tour itself, a stunning success.

It's almost as if Bob Dylan spent that tour getting to know his own music all over again; and "Flood" lets us in on his personal rediscovery. At the same time, The Band restakes its claim as the most musically sophisticated American rock group ever to grace a spotlighted stage.

THERE ARE MANY differences — subtle and otherwise — between the original versions of such Dylan tunes as "Just Like A Woman" and "All Along The Watchtower" and those on this album. There are whole new interpretations, new inflections, generally more uptempo rock arrangements. The words are the same, but meanings are often different.

Just as in many of the live performances, "It's All Right, Ma" comes across on this album as the most powerful, most meaningful tune in Dylan's acoustic set. It is one of the few "protest" songs by any writer that has lost none of its impact over the years; in some ways it now seems as prophetic as "The Times They Are A'Changin' " once did.

The Band's music takes up all of side two and half of side three, most of the tunes ranking in the "greatest hits" category. Hearing these five play should make most rock musicians weep with envy. Best of their set is a magnificent arrangement of "Up On Cripple Creek" — delicate power in a bawdy song.

INEXPLICABLY, A mellotron ("electronic strings") has been overdubbed into most of The Band's tunes on this album. No indication on the jacket why, or who played it. And while it must be admitted that the tunes so altered do come off well, it also suggests the possibility of other studio enhancements less readily detected.

On the other hand, when results are this pleasing one is less inclined to be a purist about the "Recorded Live in Concert" sub-title.

The album ends with two Dylan songs that remain unchanged in mood or interpretation despite sharply altered arrangements. They are tunes that became anthems — one personal, one social — for a generation of Americans: "Like A Rolling Stone" and "Blowing In The Wind." Almost because of this status — these songs serve more as triggers to memory of times past than as immediate, intensely affecting messages. A great climax to a superb album, nonetheless.

"BEFORE THE Flood" revives the hopes so many have held for the renewed Dylan-Band association. It also carries a challenge for the artists — to capture the same magic, but with new material, in the sponge rubber silence of the recording studio.

If they succeed, Bob Dylan and The Band will truly have brought it all back home.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

Ethel Edison Gordon's "The Birdwatcher" might well be offered as a model for the way in which the not-so-easy "contemporary Gothic" novel of suspense, mystery and romance should be written.

First and foremost, she gives you an unusual, intriguing setting — an old Scottish mansion in the Shetland Islands. And she works into her story bits of island history and culture.

She gives you, too, a generally interesting cast of characters, including in Lisette a heroine who is neither stupid nor helpless, and in Eugene the required tight-lipped, mystery man.

Lisette, herself in a spin as a result of her fiance's death in Vietnam, answers a desperate call for help from her beautiful cousin Irene, and hurries to join her in the Shetlands. There Lisette discovers a strange tension between Irene and her husband Eugene, a man who both attracts and repells the new arrival. Another guest, Jim, is as mystified as Lisette. Irene insists her husband is trying to kill her. Eugene hints that there is something very wrong with his wife, but refuses specifics. And there is a baldheaded man who appears in the night. "Just a birdwatcher," Eugene tells his guests. A hired killer, claims Irene.

Mrs. Gordon creates her mood well, and build her suspense and excitement. She brings international politics into her story, too. Important papers are missing from the anti-missile laboratory where Lisette has been working. Could those be what the "birdwatcher" is after?

One might wish that Mrs. Gordon had permitted the islanders to play larger roles in her story. They are barely seen. But that is a minor criticism of an engaging novel for which even the jacket art by Charles Geer merits special praise.

Do-It-Yourself Woodworker Needs Place To Ply Hobby

HOME AND YARD

By GEORGE MONTGOMERY

The first challenge for the budding woodworking buff is creation of a workshop.

In another article we discussed the tools a beginner will need and how he can build up his tool chest as his skills progress. But the do-it-yourself woodworker also needs a place to ply his hobby.

For some, space is no problem. For others, it may be a problem but should not be regarded as a deterrent. Suitable locations for a workshop are a basement, a garage, the attic or almost any unused room in your home.

DEPENDING UPON your personal requirements, the space you choose must have some specific qualifications. For example: It should be comfortably warm in winter and cool in summer. It must have adequate electrical outlets for lighting and power tools. It must have good ventilation so there will be no buildup of fumes. It should be dry so dampness doesn't damage your tools.

After your tools, the most important fixture in your workshop will be your work bench. You can buy one or make one.

If you decide to build your own, make it of heavy lumber, using two-inch-thick planks for the top. It must be steady under hard use, such as when you are sawing and planing. The best bench height will depend on your height, but 36 inches is a good average. Remember, you will be working at it standing up.

MOST PEOPLE prefer to locate their work bench against a convenient wall. There are several reasons for this. It makes best use of available space; even more important, the wall provides a convenient place to hang tools within easy reach while you are working.

There are several ways of hanging your tools on the wall. One is to attach a perforated pegboard to the wall behind your bench. You can buy various-size tool holders that fit into the pegboard. Or, if you want to follow the do-it-yourself approach all the way, fasten a sheet of plywood to the wall. Now, to the plywood, nail strips of heavy cloth, such as canvas, with appropriate sized loops to hold your various tools.

To hang heavier tools, such as hammers and hatchets, I suggest you drill small holes near the ends of the wooden handles and hang them on finishing nails that you have driven into the plywood.

YOU CAN KEEP track of which tool belongs where by drawing its outline on the plywood with a marking pen.

It also will be helpful to place one or more shelves on the wall back of or close to your workbench for nails, screws and other accessories.

Now a suggestion for those not lucky enough to have space that can be devoted exclusively to the workshop: Your kitchen in all probability has a sizable work area and a sturdy table. Make a removable bench top that you can clamp on the table. Then when you are working, cover the floor with a layer of newspapers over which you lay a piece of heavy canvas.

Many a fine piece of furniture has been made on such a makeshift bench.

THE SWING IS A PART OF SUMMER

FOR GENERATIONS of Americans, the porch swing was essential to the enjoyment of those lazy days of summer. And when its popularity began to wane, something very significant seemed to go out of our way of life. Now, fortunately, the swing is making a comeback. It's all part of the nostalgia for a time when man knew how to relax. And part of a growing realization that we are pushing ourselves too hard these days. But, you say, your home doesn't have a porch! Small matter. You can hang your swing from all sorts of places, including the sturdy branches of an overhanging shade tree, or the roof of the patio or carport. But before you experience that simple pleasure of swinging in the summer breezes, you must first build your swing. Send $1.25 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for his Hanging Swing Pattern 288. You'll find it an easy do-it-yourself project that can be accomplished with the simplest tools. Except for the painting, it can be completed in one evening. The swing, being shown here by actress Beverly Adams, is lightweight and comfortable. It is suspended on a chain, and can be easily raised, lowered or tilted to suit your needs. Don't be surprised to discover that there is something therapeutic about swinging. The cares of the day just seem to blow away.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I recently took up woodworking and have made several things not too difficult for a beginner. Some years ago I saw a table with four legs of ordinary plumbing pipe. I would like to duplicate it, but need help on how the legs are attached to the underside of the table top.

A. — The end of each piece of pipe is threaded and then screwed into a flange which is attached to the underside of the table. Since the threaded end must fit perfectly into the flange, be sure to purchase the flanges first or, better yet, buy the flanges and the proper pipe at the same place. The ends of the pipe opposite the threads should be filed thoroughly to be sure there are no rough parts to it's best to apply crutch tips to the pipe ends.

Q. — A few years ago I had a table custom-made. The man who made it said he had French-polished it and that it would retain its luster for many years. But it looks a little seedy now and I want to clean it. I remember the man said it should be cleaned with some preparation that I could mix myself, and that beeswax was one of the ingredients. Do you know any home-made preparation that contains beeswax?

A. — There are various commercial polishes that probably would do the job. However, if you want to try the old-time mixture your table-maker was talking about, it consists of one part of beeswax to one part of linseed oil. Mix well, then add some turpentine — about one fifth as much as the wax-oil combination.

Q. — Can you tell me the difference between welding and sweating metals?

A. — In welding, the pieces to be joined are melted. In sweating, solder is used to bond the metals.

The Lowly Worm Can Be The Gardener's Best Friend

By PETER TONGE

Daryl Lee is self-employed. He runs a thriving business which unhappily cuts deeply into the time he has available for gardening.

Even so what he's producing in a 15-by-15-foot garden this season is "remarkable," to quote an admiring neighbor. Tomatoes and peppers were the bumper crops but carrots, beets, and onions performed pretty well, too.

In fact, Lee would like to expand his grow-your-own effort next summer. But while he could tend a larger garden, digging out the turfs to increase its size is "too time consuming for me to undertake."

THERE IS AN easier way, however. I did it last year with very satisfying results as a good many astute gardeners have done for some while now.

I, too, know what it is like to dig sod. So in late '72 I followed some advice in the Organic Gardening and Farming magazine and extended my garden the no-dig way.

In the fall I covered the grassy areas where I planned new beds with about two to three inches of shredded leaves. Whole leaves will do if you can get them to stay in place. So will hay or indeed any mulching material. This mulch effectively killed the grass though it didn't get rid of the tough fibrous roots in the soil; however, this proved no deterrent to plant growth.

COME SPRING I simply parted the leaves, made a cut with a trowel in the soil, and inserted the plant. Then the soil was pressed firmly around the roots and the leaves brushed back around the stem.

The plants — tomatoes, cabbages, zinnias, and dwarf marigolds — thrived. They grew as vigorously as their sisters in the long-cultivated sections. I have heard of other gardeners being similarly successful with a great variety of different plants.

The story, of course, doesn't end there. When I cleared the beds last fall my garden fork sank deeply and easily into the soft soil. In just one growing season the grass roots, which can take years to decay if just dug up and placed in a pile, had completely disappeared.

What I suspect happened is this: Earth worms, drawn by the hundreds to the decaying leaves, also fed on the dead grass roots, converting them to rich soil.

Earth worms: I cannot speak too highly of them. Feed them with leaves, grass, vegetable peeling, etc., and they will work for you all day long — and at night, too. They dig for you, they aerate the soil for you, they fertilize it for you — all for free!

Floribundas Mean Masses Of Blossoms

A floribunda rose means mass bloom in bright beautiful shades that transform a garden into a quilt-work of color. Many are perfect miniatures of their hybrid tea parent.

Because Floribundas have a long blooming period they are often used for sprays and color effects in gardens. Low growing, they also make excellent low hedges along fences, driveways or borders.

Floribunda roses can still be obtained in containers, already blooming, and ready for planting. Select the sites for your floribunda choices and place the plants, root balls and all into planting holes which should be twice as wide as the container and six inches deeper.

Make sure that the original ball of soil sits up out of the ground anywhere from a quarter to a full inch, depending on how heavy the soil is in your garden. Allow for settling. Water and fertilize well.

Some Of The Secrets Of Summer Lawn Care

Few sights are so pleasing to the eye as a cool green expanse of lawn, during a warm summer day.

If your lawn is anything but a cool green expanse, don't despair. Chances are you can correct the trouble in no time at all.

There are four main reasons for an unattractive lawn: lawn moths, packed soil, fertilizer burns, incorrect watering methods.

LAWN MOTHS, trouble number one, lay their larvae in the lawn; when the baby moths emerge from the eggs they immediately begin eating the grass blades at the base. There are many excellent sprays and dry compounds to apply to your lawn to eradicate this lawn pest.

Packed soil is a common cause of lawn trouble, especially in the areas where adobe or clay soil prevails, which includes much of the area being gardened in California. Packed soil can be corrected by spiking with a hand spiker or applying a dry or liquid soil-conditioner.

Actually, this procedure is of a temporary nature. Proper conditioning is most important at the time you first install your lawn.

FERTILIZER BURN is the result of incorrect fertilizing methods. Always follow the directions on the package; never fertilize a wet lawn but apply fertilizer when the grass is dry and water heavily immediately afterward.

If you to burn the grass when fertilizing, soak the areas thoroughly to flood out the extra fertilizer.

Use a stationary sprinkler when watering the lawn. Hand watering is inadequate, for few gardeners have the patience to hold a hose long enough for the water to penetrate to grass roots. Encourage the formation of deep roots in your lawn by watering thoroughly, deeply and at regular intervals. When grass roots are deep they draw nourishment from the ground as well as from above.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✔This is the time to visit nurseries and see summer shrubs in bloom and choose the colors and shapes you want for your garden. Oleanders, Hydrangeas, Hibiscus and Abelias are just a few to consider.

✔If crab grass is a problem, use one of the weed killers made especially to eradicate this pest. Controls should be applied several times at regular intervals.

✔Tuberous Begonias in flower are to be found in nurseries now. Use plants where they have a north or east exposure, or under lath or high-branching trees. They are spectacular color fill-ins.

ABC LINEUP

A Look At The Coming Season

By ARTHUR UNGER
(First of three articles)
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Here in television's production heartland, the good old summer time is not vacation time. It is the season for activating the fantasy lines in the dream factories which turn out practically all of the shows you will see on the major networks.

The factories are really humming right now because the upcoming 1974-75 season which premiers in early September represents one of the most complete programming changeovers in the history of network scheduling.

If there is any recognizable trend in the new ABC schedule, it is not so much in the elimination of violence as it is in the shifting of so-called action shows to later time slots and an obvious attempt to schedule comedy shows suitable for younger viewers in the early evening. At this stage — with hundreds of scripts still to be written and hundreds of actors still to be cast — speculation about probable success and failure is just that — speculation.

Meanwhile, I have been looking at ABC pilots and early sequences, talking with ABC executives, producers and stars in an attempt to pre-sample the new season's offerings. In the midst of a unique kind of frenzy which somehow incorporates practical matters like money and counter-programming into the creative process, I have found some shows well on the way to completing their initial 13 sequences, some just getting started, a few remaining in an amazingly premature state for such a late date.

But in all cases there are harried staffs churning out ideas and scripts, casting actors, scouting locations, re-examining concepts, all worrying whether the activity is going to end in acceptance or rejection by the ultimate consumer —the American viewing public.

"The Sonny Comedy Review" (Sundays) has one major asset — the production staff of the CBS "Sonny and Cher Show" which shared the fate of the couple's marriage. Sonny is probably the most uncertain quantity ever to make it to a show of his own. It will be variety, with Sonny bouncing off such guest stars as Lana Turner and Rita Hayworth. A lot of people will be watching Sonny if only to see if he can make it all alone.

Monday and Tuesday nights entertainment have been retained intact by ABC with "The Rookies" and "NFL Monday Night Football" on Monday; "Happy Days," "Tuesday Movie of the Week," and "Marcus Welby" on Tuesday.

"That's My Mama" (Wednesdays) seems to be a kind of updated "Amos 'n' Andy" show featuring two superb black stars — Clifton Davis and Theresa Merritt — caught in all-too-predictable comedy situations. Clifton is a barber, clipping away in a front-of-the-house barber shop which fills up now and then with stock characters. It is bound to be compared to "Good Times" — probably unfavorably.

"Get Christie Love" (Wednesdays) features another "Laugh-in" graduate, Teresa Graves, who plays a black supercop, although not quite as super as she played her in the Movie-of-the-Week pilot. Miss Graves insists that she will be more Colombo than Mannix.

"Paper Moon" (Thursdays) picks up where the movie left off with the disadvantage of not having Ryan and Tatum O'Neal in the leads. Instead, two other fine performers — 11-year-old Jody Foster (you remember her from "My Three Sons") and Christopher Connelly (you remember him from "Peyton Place") play this odd couple wandering the Kansas plains in the 1930s, conning the natives in order to survive; it's "The Waltons" gone wrong.

"Harry O" (Thursdays) features David Janssen in his fourth TV series. Based on the suspense movie "Smile Jenny, You're Dead," it's all about a retired police detective, tough on the outside but sensitive underneath. That's what I like — an original concept.

"Kodiak" (Fridays) features Clint Walker as an Alaskan state policeman. Lots of snow . . . lots of action . . . lots of Clint. Call it "Alaska Five-O."

"The Texas Wheelers" (Fridays) seems to me to be the ABC show with the most innovative concept. It's about a broken family which the oldest son keeps together — his biggest problem being dear old dad, played by that lovable villain Jack Elam whom you may remember from "The Dakotas." The off-beat relationships seem to be handled with a kind of whacky understanding and the concept of dad as a hero-villain is rather daring. If it can toe the line and remain delicate enough in its boldness, "Texas Wheelers" could make it.

"The Night Stalker" (Fridays) is a continuation of the Kolchak character featured in two of ABC's highest rated movies of the week —"The Night Stalker" and its sequel "The Night Strangler." Darren McGavin plays a newspaper reporter in conflict with a monster of the week. There will be lots of werewolves and vampires and another variety of monster — the city editor.

"The New Land" (Saturdays) is ABC's bow to "The Waltons." Based on two Swedish films — "The Immigrant" and "The New Land" — this show concerns itself with a family in a Scandinavian community in Minnesota in 1858. ABC promises to be patient, hoping for a Walton's kind of gradual build-up in popularity. It's a gentle show with an honest try for authenticity. The question is whether TV can absorb still another Walton-type family saga.

"Nakia" (Saturdays) is about an Indian sheriff in New Mexico, to be shot mostly on location in Albuquerque.

And with so much depending upon time periods and opposition, the best shows may very well prove to be popular failures despite their superiority. But, taking it all into consideration, if I had to choose the sure ratings winners today they would be "The Night Stalker" and "The Texas Wheelers" with a good chance for "Where's the Fire?" if "Apple's Way" falters.

Most significant show to watch is "The New Land" which is slotted opposite "All in the Family" on Saturday night. If this simple saga makes it against the abrasive "All in the Family," it may very well herald the new era of prime-time gentleness which was predicted after the success of "The Waltons" two seasons ago and which has never quite materialized.

Pay Television Is Making A Comeback Across Nation

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Pay TV is growing rapidly because of a Federal Communications Commission decision two years ago permitting pay TV to use already installed cable systems. But there are problems about R-rated movies now seen in the living room. And most pay TV operations have yet to offer programs other than movies.)

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Remember the great pay television controversy of the early 1960s?

Pay TV promoters had an appealing pitch — first run movies, uncut, uncensored, uninterrupted by commercials, brought into your home along with a smattering of sports and special programs.

You could see box-office hits on your television set whenever you wished "for only pennies daily," they promised, and no parking or babysitting problem.

California voters banned pay TV in a state referendum that later was declared unconstitutional. Some congressmen threatened legislation to prohibit pay TV.

The controversy and the cost of installation seemed to doom pay TV. Network television also was showing more recent movies. Why pay.

But today pay TV may be staging a resurgence.

In the past year, more than 28 cable television systems have begun piping movies into the home for a fee. About 60,000 homeonwers throughout the country now have pay TV from old and new companies. The majority are in California.

"I think we've got quite a future ahead of us," said John W. Atwood, president of Theta Cable Television in Los Angeles, which has about 14,000 subscribers for its two-month-old Z Channel.

Optical Systems Inc. of Los Angeles operates its Channel 100 system for 28,000 subscribers in San Diego and Santa Barbara, Calif.; Toledo, Ohio; Harrisburg and Easton, Pa., and Moline, Ill.

Optical, perhaps the largest pay TV operation in the country now, plans to open systems soon in Concord, Calif., and Flint, Mich. "We're pleased with the results so far for the most part," says Geoffrey Na-

Pay TV Is Making Comeback In Nation

thanson, Optical president.

Theta, Optical and other cable operators are counting on pay TV as an attraction to sell cable TV in areas where reception is good.

Most theater owners don't seem to mind now because movie studios are protecting theaters by making films available to pay television only after the theater run.

Commercial television spokesmen say they doubt that even with millions of subscribers pay TV will never be able to compete with "free" programming.

Cable operators say viewers are continuing to watch regular TV rare, turning to pay TV movies in the off hours.

A big minus for pay television in the 1960s was the hookup cost. Pay TV companies charged up to $100 to install devices to pick up their over-the-air broadcasts.

Two years ago the Federal Communications Commission, in a breakthrough decision, authorized pay television over cable systems. The basic installation cost of a cable system usually runs about $15 in a metropolitan area. The monthly fee runs from $7 to $10. About seven million Americans have cable TV.

Theta's Z channel, currently available only in the Los Angeles suburbs of Santa Monica, West Los Angeles and Beverly Hills, offers two movies a week for $6 to $8.45 monthly. This is in addition to the $7 to $10 monthly the homeowner must pay for a cable TV system needed to receive pay TV. The typical pay TV apparatus is a panel of buttons which permits the viewer to call up on his TV screen any of the programs offered by the company.

Recent Z Channel movies included "Serpico," "Avanti," "The New Centurions," "Lost Horizons" and "Westworld."

Channel 100 offers three movies a week — two new ones and an "encore" — for $8 a month. During a recent week in San Diego, viewers could see "Oklahoma Crude," "Godspell" and "The French Connection."

The movies, which range up to a "soft" R, are shown uncensored in the home — and that has caused some squawks and cancellations because of the language, sex and violence.

Atwood said the Z Channel has had no adverse reaction in its two months of operation. He said, "We're trying to educate our viewers that these films were made for the theater."

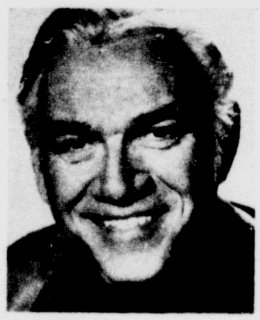
FOR LETITIA BALDRIGE,
public relations executive and former social secretary to President Kennedy

How long did you go to secretarial school and what did you get out of it?—Roberta Rich, Lansing, Mich.

● I went to stenotype and typing secretarial school for all of two months, but I finished a year's course in those two months. I had two college degrees and didn't want to hang around secretarial school all that long. I took private lessons and worked on my typing and shorthand from 8 a.m. until midnight seven days a week for two months. I finished and went to work in Paris. My advice is, no matter which type of shorthand instruction you choose, work terribly hard at it and get it over with. Then you have tools to use forever, in your career and in your homelife, too.



FOR LORNE GREENE

How old were you when you turned gray?—N. Fourman, Fayetteville, N.C.

● Twenty-four. It runs in my family. My mother was 22 when she turned gray.

FOR TOM HEINSOHN, coach of the Boston Celtics

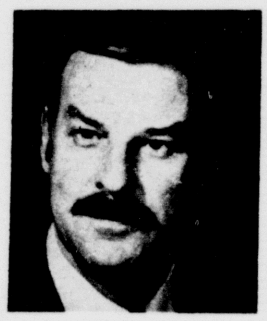
Does it bug you when people say you look like Ernest Borgnine?—J. J. Murphy, Austin, Texas

● Not at all. He played Vince Lombardi on television. Someday I may play the title role in "The Life of Ernest Borgnine."

FOR H. STUART KNIGHT,
director of the U.S. Secret Service

I was surprised to read that Secret Service men are still guarding John F. Kennedy Jr. Do you also guard Jacqueline Onassis and Caroline Kennedy?—M.T. Davidson, Utica, N.Y.

● Public Law 90-608 provides for the Secret Service to protect the widow of a former President until her death or remarriage, and to protect the minor children of a former President until they reach 16. At this time John F. Kennedy Jr., is the only child of a former President receiving protection from the Secret Service.



FOR DORIS DAY

What does your organization, Actors and Others for Animals, tell people to do about movies that show pain or death inflicted on animals?—John Thompson, Durham, N.C.

● We urge people to boycott films that inflict pain or death on animals for purposes of "entertainment." They may obtain a list of these films from the American Humane Association. We also urge them to write to their state representatives demanding legislation that would prohibit the showing of films in which animals are deliberately killed or harmed for the purpose of making a movie.

FOR DAN ROWAN

I understand that you are a diabetic. If you were to go into shock away from home, how would people know what the problem was?—A. Casey, Allentown, Pa.

● I wear a bracelet with the Medic Alert emblem on one side and medical information on the other. There is also a phone number that can be called to get additional computerized information about my ailment. Medic Alert is in Turlock, Calif. Their bracelets are worn by all sorts of people with allergies and other hidden medical problems.

FOR RICH LITTLE, impressionist

I am a fan of yours and do 70 impressions. How many do you do?—Frank Gillespie, Reseda, Calif.

● I do 130.

FOR DONNA FARGO

Your song, "Society's Got Us by the You-Know-What," sounds like a political statement. Is it?—M. M., Millwood, N.Y.

● Well—I don't like to get involved in politics, even though I'm normally a Democrat. I don't want to influence the way people vote, because I don't think I know enough about politics to do that. As for the song—I think it's our own fault if we allow society to get that kind of grip on us. We ourselves are responsible for the predicaments we get into.

FOR LORETTA SWIT,
*"Hot Lips Houlihan" in "M*A*S*H"*

I read that you were picked for your "M*A*S*H" part while playing Agnes Gooch in "Mame." How did this happen?—H. J., Easton, Pa.

● I couldn't believe it either, but the two characters do have a lot in common. Both are repressed and trying to hide from life. Both are up-tight and straitlaced—then when the barriers are down, they go bananas. Both have great capacity to love, and both are frustrated.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Is it true that Glenda Jackson has announced her retirement from movies? My girl friend says she has—but I can't believe it.—S. James, Waterbury, Conn.

● Your friend is wrong. Glenda Jackson did make the statement she was thinking of quitting to become a social worker, but even then she was preparing to start work in a new film, "The Maids," in Rome. Her unhappiness was over her belief that roles for women in their late thirties and forties are limited, and that this means she has an uncertain future. Miss Jackson, 37, has won two Academy Awards for Best Actress within five years—in 1970 for "Women in Love," and this year for "A Touch of Class."

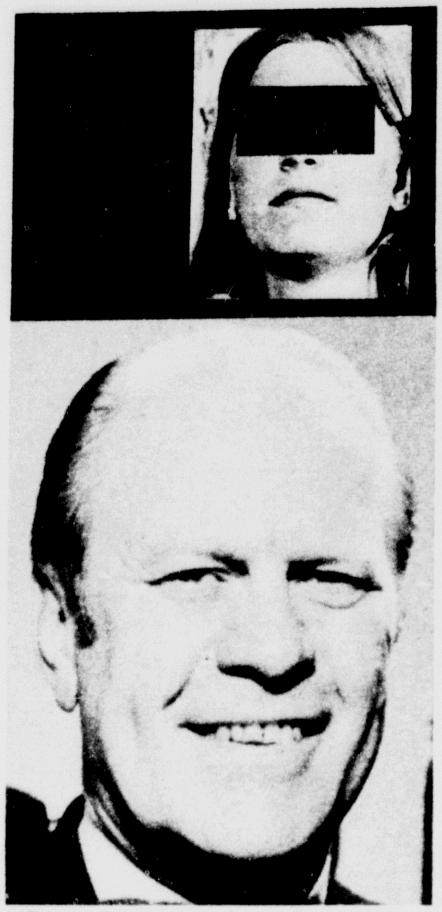
Special Report:

How "Kidnap Fever" Is Rocking Washington

By Frances Spatz Leighton



Wide World

"Kidnap threats have been directed at the Vice President's 16-year-old daughter Susan. . . ."

Quietly, all over Washington, our nation's leaders and their families have been changing their life-styles in the wake of the publicized Hearst, Getty and other kidnappings. Here is one Washington writer's exclusive—and disturbing—report.

"We're living in the age of the kidnapper." "It's getting unsafe in the U.S. to travel at any speed, in any vehicle." These are some of the comments on Capitol Hill concerning the security of our national leaders and their families. "If this keeps on, we'll be living in an armed camp," commented another.

"The threats were definitely the product of a sick mind," said the congressional leader, who requested that he not be mentioned by name. "They were sent by persons trying for the most dramatic gesture they could think up at this time, when all eyes are on the Vice President as the possible next President."

As a result of this danger to the second family, an addition was recently tacked on to the 1974 Supplemental Appropriations Bill turned out by the Treasury, Postal Service and General Government Subcommittee of the House, and quietly signed into law by President Nixon on June 8.

Congressman Tom Steed (D-Okla.), chairman of the appropriations subcommittee, said that about a quarter of a million dollars will be spent guarding Susan and her brothers. Says Steed, "This figure is flexible, and if the girl and her family do a lot of traveling, it could be much more."

The rest of the $2.75 million increase in Secret Service funds will be used mainly to increase the protection of foreign embassies and their occupants.

In an exclusive interview, Representative Steed added: "There are 40,000 names on file of persons who want to do harm to national leaders. It is a manifestation of the violence that is typical of this time in history. This is an age in which people in the limelight become symbols that certain kinds of minds want to destroy."

Vice President Ford, on the advice of the Secret Service, has canceled various picture stories that had been planned around Susan, and she has been told to keep a low profile.

This is a sad state of affairs for a happy-go-lucky girl who loves people and loves roaming around. She worked at the White House all last summer, helping sell the White House "Guidebook" to tourists. If she works again this summer, it will be in a subdued and carefully guarded way.

All around Washington, there is a bit of the feeling of an armed outpost. Visitors to the Capitol Building and the offices surrounding it may not realize that the jovial tourist-type character tagging along with their group is a Capitol policeman in plainclothes. "We can't run a police camp," says Sergeant at Arms Ken Harding, chairman of the Capitol Police Board, "but we are doing everything we can think of to protect the life and limb of all citizens. We are aware of the political climate, and though we can't send Capitol police roaming the country to protect our leaders, we do have a close relationship with all other law-enforcement people across the country, even when a threat is made against a congressman in his home district as far away as Los Angeles."

What's to be done?

There have been a lot of suggestions. One is that there be a pool of Capitol police a congressman can call on when he feels threatened or endangered as he ventures away from his office on Capitol Hill. Something like a secretarial pool. At this moment, protection of congressmen stops the moment they step off the Capitol grounds.

Senators and congressmen who have young children, people like Sen. Daniel K. Inouye (D-Hawaii) and Congressman William Stanton (R-Ohio), are especially concerned over the climate of fear. Inouye, who gained fame, as well as an avalanche of vitriol, as a Watergate committeeman, had to tell his nine-year-old son not to answer the phone anymore.

And Bill Stanton, who was proud a few years ago when his wife collaborated on a cookbook with another young congressional wife, now says, "We no longer even tell where our little six-year-old daughter goes to school."

"This is an age in which people in the limelight become symbols that certain kinds of minds want to destroy."

He also told FAMILY WEEKLY: "We now have security for her on her way to and from school. We don't like it, but it's a fact of life." His wife's cookbook, "Meals for Moppets," contained the pictures of his children and those of Sen. Mark Hatfield. Says Stanton, "If the book were being put out today, we wouldn't permit pictures to be taken. It's just a precaution. I hope things will change and that we'll no longer need this kind of blackout."

All kinds of ideas are being talked about for protecting government officials and the general public. One protective idea is a telephone book with addresses omitted. "If you want someone to have your address you can give it to him when you talk to him on the phone," says a law official, who points out that when Patricia Hearst was kidnapped, a University of California student directory was found in a public lobby open to her name, address and phone number.

Congress is currently in a state of agitated confusion over how to deal with the kidnapping threat that hangs over every person of wealth or fame.

As a result of the Hearst case, Rep. James M. Collins (D-Texas) has introduced a bill that would make it an offense to accept "the fruits of kidnapping." This would have included—had the bill been law at the time—the $2-million Hearst food giveaway. If passed, HR 13302 would impose a $1,000 fine, a year's imprisonment, or both, for benefiting from a kidnapping.

On the Senate side, two men, Sen. Roman Hruska (R-Neb.) and Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.), have introduced a bill that would restore the death penalty in cases of kidnapping that resulted in death to any victims.

The bill—S1401—has passed the Senate and at this writing awaits action in the House. Strangely enough, Sen. Edward F. Kennedy, who has much to fear from kidnappers and who faces danger every day, voted against the bill. And for a very interesting reason. As Senator Kennedy explained it, if a hijacker, say, had already killed one man and was in danger of being caught, he might go ahead and kill all his other hostages because his own death would already be a certainty.

Incidentally, Senator Kennedy's personal protective burdens will be intensified this summer because of his promise to his niece, Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the late President, that she will have an intern's job in his office. Already the word has gone out that pictures are to be strictly limited, if not forbidden.

Caroline, at 16, no longer is entitled to Secret Service protection as her younger brother, John Kennedy, Jr., is. Sixteen is the cutoff date for the Secret Service to protect children of past Presidents. But you can be sure that as long as she is working in the Senator's office, Capitol Hill police will keep an eagle eye on her.

I got this reaction when I called one congressman's wife about the kidnap scare:

"Please don't use our name. Our children are the only thing we have in the whole world that we care about. We don't want any kidnappers to know that we are afraid. But we have every possible device to protect our home. Please, don't print our name."

(And How Should Parents React?)

"All kids tell lies. Not just some, all. And when they do, parents usually react in the same way."

Walter Chandoha

By Julie Hallett

"It was in sixth-grade gym class. My friend and I were given the assignment of putting away the gym equipment during noon hour. Finding ourselves alone in the gym, we began horsing around. One of us got the bright idea of lowering one of the wooden climbing poles from the ceiling. One of us hung on the pole while the other pulled it up and down via the pulley system. All of a sudden—snap!—the pole broke! . . . Luckily, no one was hurt. But how to explain the broken pole?

"We made up what seemed to us a plausible story. We told the teacher that a man wearing a mask and a black cape had suddenly dashed in through the side door, lowered the climbing pole from the ceiling, broke it, then ran back out.

"It seemed so logical! And, after repeating the lie a few times, we were half-convinced that it really was the truth!"

All kids tell lies. Not just some, all. And when they do, parents usually react in the same way. They get angry.

But the truth is, telling lies is a normal part of growing up. And, even if you as a parent have to count to ten, it's worth listening calmly, because it just might be that, while it seems like a lie, what your child is really trying to tell you is a deeper kind of truth!

"Look, Mommy—I Am Me!"

Many children begin to lie before they're even able to talk. Take Tommy, for example. He was midway through potty training when he had an accident on the living room rug. When his mother came in and saw what he had done, Tommy pointed to the dog.

Does this mean that Tommy, though still a toddler, is already going astray? Not at all. Tommy's chief motive, of course, is to try to escape a scolding. But he is also saying that he is a separate, distinct person with thoughts and ideas that haven't been programmed by Mother. He is saying, "You are always telling me things that I have to accept at face value; now let's see if you will accept things that I tell you."

These first testings of mental independence may be just as important to the child as are his first faltering attempts at physical independence.

A neighbor of mine has a little girl, Dotty, who (like most little girls) loves to play at her mother's vanity. One day she accidentally spilled a bottle of her mother's most expensive perfume on her dress. Using a four-year-old's logic, Dotty came up with an ingenious way to destroy the evidence: She took a pair of scissors and neat-

She also manages to find time for tennis, golf and looking after her good looks. To keep her silvery hair bright and beautiful, she uses Silk & Silver, Clairol's long lasting color lotion in Silvery Pearl* #14.

"So easy," says Mrs. Barker, "I just shampoo it in every few weeks—it colors away the yellow, adds lots of body and wonderfully rich deep color." And it has no peroxide.

What Does It Feel Like to Create Today's Music?

By Loraine Alterman

CARLY SIMON

"I don't write songs for the public. I write them for myself. I write them out of little ideas that come into my head during the day. For instance, I started to write a song about being a little girl and standing in the doorway and listening to my parents' and their friends' conversation. As a child I was thinking, 'How safe they are, how sure of themselves the grown-ups are and when I get to be their age, I'll be sure of myself, too.' But really, it's the penny-candy syndrome. You think, 'I just can't wait until I have enough money to get 100 sticks of penny candy,' and then when you are able to afford it, it makes you fat or it puts cholesterol in your blood or you don't want it any more. It's just that whole thing about growing up and being grown up myself and having a little girl standing in the door. It happened just the other night. She was looking with such awe at me being one of the grown-ups and I was sitting there thinking, 'I feel so uncomfortable, so shy and so unsure of myself.' And all the songs kind of come out of an experience. I don't consciously want to put a message across. If it happens, it happens. I guess there are some people who sit down and say, 'All right, I want to write a hit single. Let's see, what's a big item at the moment?' But I've never worked like that."

"I guess there are some people who sit down and say, 'All right, I want to write a hit single. Let's see, what's a big item at the moment?' But I've never worked like that."—Carly Simon

BO DIDDLEY

"They say a boy is grown at 21. He ain't. He's just beginning to learn some sense. The reason I can speak this way is because I've been 21, too. And I know what happened coming up. I thought I was the smartest little dude around. I thought I had all the answers—but right now I'm still learning stuff every day. So it's impossible for you to know it all. On the other hand, parents should listen to rock music before they knock the sound. Don't sit at home and look at TV. Get off the dead hind parts, put on something, and if you go to a place where the kids go, the kids ain't going to refuse you. If the parent says, 'I'm the parent of a kid who comes in here all the time and I just wanted to see what they're doing,' it's better than coming dragging the police behind you. I think we would have a little better thing with the kids and older people."

DON McLEAN

"I plan to be in music for much longer than most of the people who are around now, but I don't plan to be in it in a way that places me in a historical period as part of a group or as part of a series of individuals that helped shape a certain kind of music. This is partly because of my own unwillingness to be involved in any kind of society. It's partly also because I lack a concrete musical style. I don't fit into the rock 'n' roll thing. I don't fit into folk music. I don't fit into pop music. Sometimes I lament that. I really love Chuck Berry and all those songs he does. They sort of sound alike, but he can afford to make them all sound alike because they sound so good. James Taylor has that. He has a style of his own, and so does Dylan. I lament the fact sometimes that I don't have it. On the other hand, I also have the chance to experiment and do what I want because people don't expect any one thing of me. Therefore, when they get something, they're surprised. One of the things that is really wrong with the experts on all levels of the arts, especially in pop music, is that they are unwilling to look backward. We must always have one eye on the past and one eye on the future in order to make the present more substantial. If I did anything in my life, it would be to get that point across so that people would not be hung up on this notion of constant newness."

BETTE MIDLER

"This isn't what I want my career to be, but what the fates do to me and what and where my audiences carry me. It's something that you can't do by yourself. It has to be in concert—they love you and you love them back; it all comes from that. I don't want to make a movie and I'm not interested in doing a play. I want to work out all the things I have to say within the framework of the music. My show is a show, not an act, and there's a very subtle difference. An act is not as honest as I'm trying to be. What I do is very theatrical but it's also very musical. There are some places that I haven't been to with it yet. You see, I am 'Miss M,' and that is one point that is both a drawback and an advantage. Some people come only to see 'Miss M'—the image of Bette Midler—not the real Bette Midler. Some people come to see Bette Midler and wish 'Miss M' would take a dump. But I feel that it's all one. I want people to understand that all the songs and all the experiences and all the glitter and all the words all come from me, from one person, from one personality. And that's what I have created. That's the way I express myself. I can't paint and I don't write very well, so that is the expression of me. And I have other things that I want to say and I will be expressing myself until I run dry."

RANDY NEWMAN

"Writing is always hard work, no matter how fast it comes. I mean it's something to put yourself in a room with nothing there and come out with something. Some good songs come real fast, but a lot of times they don't and I'll work over them. I throw out more and more songs because it gets harder, not easier. I really hate to write. It's harder than performing. I mean performing you're there and it's done and you don't have to listen to it, think about it. Writing, you can't stop thinking about. When I work on something, I can't turn it off. I wish I disciplined myself to work a certain number of hours a day. I've made lists for myself, schedules, all my life. Tolstoy did that from the time he was 15 until he was 80. He'd make lists of ways he was going to improve himself, but he never followed one of them. I did my own lists before I knew he did it, but I've never been able to follow them either. I'd like to be able to sit right down and work on schedule. When I have to work, I do. I very rarely have gotten up in the middle of the night with an idea and felt it was worthwhile the next day. I don't know how the ideas start; but then if I knew, I could do it all the time. I think writers are the craziest people in the whole entertainment thing. There's nothing concrete about it. Things change from under you. You think something's great and then later it sounds terrible to you. I can't listen to anything I do."

WHY PLANT A GROUND COVER?

In many areas and situations, ground covers are more appropriate and more satisfactory than turf. They are able to grow and thrive in sun OR shade, and in poor soil.

On steep slopes where mowing is difficult, ground cover is much more effective and much less laborious to maintain than grass. Ground covers hold the soil as well as turf and the textures are far more interesting.

Small areas of grass are a continual chore to keep mown and trimmed but ground covers require almost no care. They are excellent protection and soil conditioners. They hold the fallen leaves from blowing away, thus helping to add annually to the humus content.

WHY CREEPING RED SEDUM?

One of Sedum's most valuable assets is its full time beauty. Lush foliage begins in early spring, and star-shaped wine red flowers delight the viewer from late June through September. The attractive semi-evergreen foliage lasts well into winter, maintaining its rich green and bronze color nearly all year round.

Besides being one of the loveliest of the ground covers, Sedum also rates high on the other requirements. It is hardy, grows well in sun or partial shade, in sandy soil, clay soil, or good soil.

Its thick foliage and root system hold the soil on slopes or banks. The neat 3-4" cover forms a dense perennial mat to bring green and wine red beauty to slopes, borders, rocky areas, anywhere beauty and durability are needed.

Each plant will easily and quickly spread to fill one sq. ft. Sedum spreads evenly, maintains its uniform smooth beauty at all stages of growth. Unlike some other ground covers, Sedum, also called "Dragon's Blood," stays where you put it — does not straggle out into places where it doesn't belong. Sedum is almost indestructible, enduring and persisting against heavy climatic and nutritional odds.

FULLY GUARANTEED

All items guaranteed to be of high quality, exactly as advertised and to arrive in good healthy condition or purchase price will be refunded. RETURN SHIPPING LABEL ONLY —you may keep the plants. (One year limit).

SEND this Special Offer Coupon TODAY to receive your Red Sedum and Peonies!

Now is a Good Time to Plant RED SEDUM!

Your young Sedum plants will establish themselves and begin to spread a few days after planting. In a month or so they will already be 3-4 inches in diameter. They may lose their foliage as the first winter progresses but will leaf out again in early spring. During a long growing season they may reach 12" in diameter, always maintaining their neat regulated shape.

What the Experts Don't Tell You About Eating

True or False: The manner in which you eat provides a clue to your sense of security. (See number 3)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How good food tastes to you depends on where you live.
2. Rewarding a child for good behavior with a piece of candy or something sweet is more effective than praise.
3. The manner in which you eat provides a clue to your sense of security.
4. Your ability to enjoy food is related to your ability to enjoy life.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies at Colorado State University have demonstrated that our ability to appreciate the various tastes of food varies markedly with the altitude. The investigation showed that our taste functions best at sea level. The researchers found that there is a significant difference in the ability to taste between sea level and 5,000 feet. Strangely, however, no significant difference results in going from 5,000 to 10,000 feet.

2. True. According to university studies in which children performed under three reward systems: social rewards (praise, special privileges—such as getting to stay up later—etc.), edible rewards and no rewards. Findings: Edible rewards achieved the best results, with candy being "the most effective reinforcer."

3. True. A psychological study of food habits shows that when there is an especially esteemed piece of food on your plate (the topping on a dessert, for example), whether you save it for last or consume it right away is highly suggestive of how insecure you feel. Eating it immediately, before anything else, is associated with an underlying feeling of anxiety—a fear of losing something. The more secure person is apt to reserve the esteemed tidbit for last.

4. True. Consensus of studies shows that the enjoyment you derive from eating is a pretty accurate barometer of how much enjoyment you get out of life. Interestingly, the mental loss of appetite—called anorexia nervosa—is chiefly caused by "dissatisfaction with the life situation in general." FW

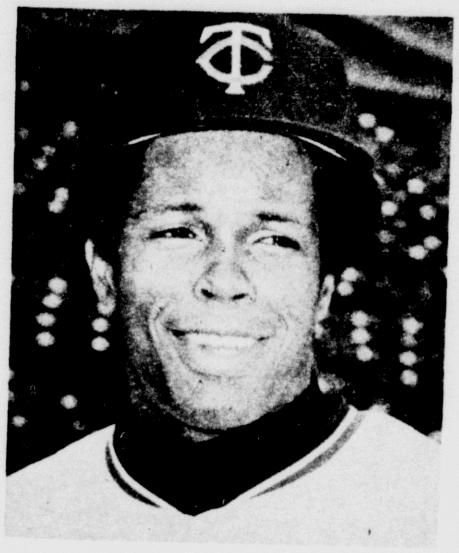
ROD CAREW:
Meet the American League's Best Hitter



Rod Carew, the American League's best hitter, used to be known as "baseball's angry man." He rarely communicated with his teammates, carried a perennial chip on his shoulder, and was always threatening to quit the game and go home. Carew's behavior was conditioned by his belief that he was the victim of racial discrimination and was scorned because he was a foreigner who spoke English with a heavy accent. . . . Carew was born on a train in Panama. He grew up in poverty, first in Panama and later in New York City. He found school difficult because of his poor English but discovered his future career when he joined a sandlot ball team and showed great natural talent. The Minnesota Twins gave him a tryout, and signed him. But his experiences in the Florida State League, where he felt he was suffering from racial slurs, nearly made him quit. . . . Carew came up to the Twins in 1967 and has established a brilliant record. He has been on the All-Star team every year, has won his league's batting championship three times, has the highest lifetime batting average among the league's active players, and is continuing to be a top hitter this season. He's also one of the game's best base runners and last year pilfered 41. . . . He's also lost that chip on the shoulder and become more outgoing. The fact that his teammates on the Twins regard him as their indispensable leader has helped dissolve his moody spells. At 28, Carew is now at the peak of his career.—By Barry Abramson

Why TB Has Not Been Conquered

"Tuberculosis is dead," you hear proudly proclaimed. Don't you believe it! TB is not dead. Of the infectious diseases, it is the leading cause of death. There are almost 33,000 new cases a year in the U.S.—with New York City residents being the worst afflicted. So TB is still here—but its treatment has changed drastically. Fresh-air sanatoriums—the treatment of decades ago—are no longer necessary. Unless it is acute, TB can be treated in any general hospital on an outpatient basis. And while bed rest and isolation are not necessary, taking medicine is lifesaving. A new anti-TB drug, Rimactine (Ciba) or rifampin, has the fewest side effects. Other drugs are ethambutol (Myambutol), PAS, isoniazid and, in acute cases, streptomycin. . . . The reason TB is such a hardy disease is because the TB germ can lie dormant in the body for decades—then become active when resistance is low. This is also the reason it is more active in older people—they have carried it longer. . . . How do you diagnose TB? Through chest X rays and tuberculin skin tests. The deciding test is finding the TB germ—called a mycobacterium—in the sputum. TB's symptoms are weight loss and coughing.

The Diet Watch

How to Track Your Snacking Pattern

An interesting experiment has been going on at the University of Pennsylvania Hospital Diet Clinic. Each diet-clinic patient acts as his own detective, tracking down and keeping a record of when he snacks: while talking, reading, cooking, watching TV—even while standing, lying down or sitting. The detective work reveals some surprises to the patients. One housewife discovered she was a habitual "afternoon eater," at the refrigerator every few minutes. Her solution: She now saves her morning shopping for afternoons, and that keeps her away from home. Another woman found she was an after-dinner kitchen snacker, so she now stays out of the kitchen after dinner, even washing her dinner dishes in the morning. By noting down the circumstances during which you snack, you can identify your vulnerable situations and deal with them better.

OTTO PREMINGER:
My Advice to Oldsters

Pictorial Parade

"Older people should stop fighting change. I'm older, but I think most changes are for the better. Older people keep claiming to remember how much better things were in their youth. Nonsense! Take, for example, all the complaints about the obscenity around today. All that obscenity really reflects is more freedom, and in the long run that's for the best. Older people complain about the ideas of youth. But what's wrong with young people saying they don't want to fight in a war? If there is a war that people don't believe in, and they say so, that's for the better. Just look around at the changes that younger people bring to life with their new ideas, and you get new enthusiasm. Older people should start enjoying the changes taking place instead of grumbling about the way it used to be." Otto Preminger, 67, is directing his latest film, "Rosebud."

People and You

Do Poor People Have More Friends?

If you enjoy watching "The Waltons," you're involved with the current nostalgia fad that shows the Depression years as a time of great human warmth. Though most nostalgia about any era is unrealistic, the family-friend warmth idea connected with poverty may actually be true. A study of 4,500 modern families' leisure habits shows that to this day poorer people regularly out-socialize more prosperous families. The poor very frequently drop in on their neighbors, relatives and friends for an informal visit of helping out, TV watching or just sitting around; and they definitely keep closer overall visiting contact with their relatives than does the average prosperous person. People with good incomes drift away from spending time with friends and kinfolk toward leisure activities that must be bought and paid for—bowling, golf, trips, restaurants, movies, etc. It's true that purchased entertainment is often interesting and fun. But the old idea of spending time with friends still satisfies a basic human need.

Children's Lies

French psychiatrist Marcel Eck—who has made in-depth studies of why children tell lies—says that it's part of a child's development to "test" adults to see whether or not they believe him. This continues, according to Eck, long after the child has learned to distinguish between reality and make-believe. The lie may sound like wishful thinking ("My daddy's so rich he has ten cars and two airplanes"); or it may be an attempt to tell you what the child thinks you want to hear ("My teacher says that I've done so well that she's not going to give me a report card this term"). Underneath it all, he's testing his ingenuity and logic against yours.

The "Cherry Tree" Syndrome

It's usually at about age seven, says Dr. Eck, that a child becomes concerned with the "evils" of lying. Suddenly little Susie or Jimmy will become more consistently and literally truthful than he has ever been before—or is likely to be again!

Some experts call this the "cherry tree" syndrome—after the famous story of George Washington and his "I-cannot-tell-a-lie" reply. All children have heard this story. The implication is that, once having confessed to chopping down his father's favorite tree, George attained instant amnesty. Not only was all forgiven, but somehow (at least in the minds of children) George's truthfulness led to his becoming a great hero and "Father of His Country."

At any rate, it certainly is true that most children look upon telling the truth as a protection from punishment. ("I told you the truth, so you're not allowed to touch me!") Truthfulness begins to be pushed to extremes: The child who becomes a tattletale; the child who gives his mother a withering look every time he overhears her giving an insincere compliment or a polite excuse.

As the child gets a little older, the super-honesty wears off and the old testing resumes—except now he's likely to be better at it than he was at age six.

"But How Can I Be Sure My Child's Lying Is Normal?"

Family counselor and psychotherapist Selma Miller says that problem lying is usually not a matter of an isolated lie or two, but of so much lying that it's a real characteristic of the child.

The most important thing for a parent to realize is that honesty in a child does not happen automatically or all at once. "Real respect for the truth," she says, "develops gradually—and not out of fear, but out of a sense of being trusted." To help maintain a good climate of mutual respect and trust in a family, Mrs. Miller suggests these simple guidelines:

1. Whenever possible, try to get a handle on the underlying source of a persistent lie. For example, suppose little Lucy keeps claiming she "lost" her 25 cents allowance, even though her parents know this isn't likely. The parents could hurt little Lucy by calling her a "liar." But that wouldn't answer the child's real problem—namely, that she is misspending her money, or that she feels she needs more than 25 cents a week.

2. Help make it easy for a child to admit when he or she has lied; if he's scared, he'll just tell more lies to cover up the first one.

3. Tell him that it makes you sad when he lies, that it's a letdown and a disappointment. Give him a chance to empathize. ("What if I told you I had a present for you and really didn't. . . .")

4. Yes, go ahead and drag out that old story about the boy who cried wolf—and how, in the last analysis, it's he and not you who'll suffer from a poor credibility rating.

5. Ask yourself why a particular lie might have gotten you so upset. Was it all because you were concerned for his safety or his morals—or could it have had to do with the fact that he flouted your authority, or put one over on you and made you feel foolish? It's normal to feel this way, but it can make you overreact.

DYAN DEL COMPOS writes to tell us...

"I lost 6¼ inches off my waist, 19 pounds of excess weight, and shaped up...in just 14 days!"

One 5 Minute exercise, twice daily, lying on my back watching T.V., reducing my food intake only by 20% — but not giving up any of the foods I love — DID IT!

14 Incredible Days Later – You better believe it – 100% Reshaped. How About You!

CASE #20693

"I lost 4½ inches off my waist, 7 pounds of excess weight... and shaped up...in just 14 days!"

One 5 Minute exercise, twice daily, lying on my back watching T.V., reducing my food intake only by 20% — but not giving up any of the foods I love — DID IT!

Only 7 Days Later – Firming, shaping and slimming results are showing.

After 14 Days – A slimmer, more youthful and shapelier body – Fast Enough!

Joe Weider, fitness expert and trainer of champions since 1956 says:

"Give me 5 minutes twice daily for only 7 days and you'll lose up to 3 inches from your waistline, up to 6 pounds of unwanted weight, and 'shape up' — or I will return every penny."

LET'S FACE THE FACTS WHY YOU'RE OUT OF SHAPE

You eat the wrong combination of foods, you do not get enough exercise to thoroughly work your muscular, metabolic and respiratory systems daily. Because of this, fat accumulates around your waistline, heart and other body organs, slowing you down, aging your body and destroying your vitality, virility and youth. There is only one way to firm up and shape up: that is through proper exercise and proper nutrition. Effortless exercisers, reducing pills, sauna shorts, weighted belts, dangerous and painful diets and other gimmicks designed to appeal to your laziness will not work and have been exposed by the medical profession as frauds, ineffective and in some cases dangerous. They can only reduce your pocketbook.

Face up to it...If you want to slim down, firm and shape up, you must work off the inches, and there is no safer, faster and more enjoyable way to do it than with our patented, truly miraculous "5" Minute Body Shaper Plan.

HOW DOES THIS INGENIOUS "5" MINUTE PLAN SLIM, FIRM AND SHAPE YOU UP?

The Weider "5" Minute Body Shaper plan is based on doing ONE CONTINUOUS, RHYTHMIC COORDINATED EXERCISE, twice daily. That's all you do. No dieting. Eat the foods you like—however, we suggest you consume 20% less food, while on this plan, for maximum results. This one five-minute exercise is designed to attack the Waist and Hips (where fat accumulates quickest, giving your body a flabby, weak and distorted look)—as well as burn off excess fat fast by speeding up stored calories and reshaping your chest, abdomen, firming up your legs and arms—your total body!

It's safer than strenuous workouts, beats the time consumption and dangers of gym workouts . . . or any other vigorous sport.

Patent Pending. Copyright Joe Weider, 1974

WHAT SATISFIED CUSTOMERS SAY:

"I lost 18 lbs. and 4½" off my waist in 14 days," R. Mathews • "I lost 13 lbs. and 4" off my waist in 14 days," M. Harvey • "I lost 15 lbs. and 2½" off my waist in 14 days," P. Results vary depending upon how much overweight you are and how much time you give to the Plan. These people have given from 5 to 15 minutes twice daily to our one simple exercise, lying on their backs in comfort, even while watching TV—(some ate between 10 to 20% less foods). Naturally, their impressive results vary. The above sampling of our hundreds of thousands of users proves that you, too, can make sensational gains. Satisfaction is guaranteed!

WHAT THE EXPERTS SAY:

Medical Doctors, Chiropractors, Osteopaths, Athletic Coaches....agree it's the most successful Waistline-Weight Reducer and Shaping Up Plan ever invented!

WHAT COMES OFF IN 14 DAYS?

Individual results vary, but during an average 14-day period you can expect to lose up to 4 inches from your waistline and up to 10 pounds from your present weight. It strengthens your heart and lungs, increases stamina and endurance, improves your digestive function and general health. It also shapes you up — from head to toes. For a "5" Minute Exerciser — it sure does a lot.

*EXPOSING EFFORTLESS EXERCISERS

Reader's Digest (Sept., 1971), New York Times and Good Housekeeping, among others, exposed sauna wraps, inflated belts, weighted belts and effortless exercisers as frauds. BILLIE JEAN KING
"I plead honesty"

QUOTE (from Billie Jean King): "I got pregnant in late February, 1971. . . . I took the usual tests and when they came out positive, there was absolutely no question about what I would do. We [Billie Jean and her husband Larry King] agreed on an abortion from the beginning and there was very little thinking about the morality involved in our decision. If that sounds shocking, all I can do is plead honesty. I mean I did believe strongly that inexpensive, legal abortions ought to be available to every woman, and since I was only about a month pregnant I didn't feel I was killing a life or anything like that. But the real reason for my decision was that I also felt it was absolutely the wrong time for me to bring a child into the world. Even though Larry and I had been married for five and a half years, we'd been living a strange, disjointed life and I felt we needed more time together by ourselves to see where our relationship was headed. I was entering a period of great change in my life, personally and professionally, and under the circumstances, I felt it wasn't proper to start a family." From "Billie Jean," by Billie Jean King with Kim Chapin (Harper & Row, Publishers, Inc., 6.95). UNQUOTE.

Mental illness may be a chemical problem. So says Dr. Ronald R. Fieve of Columbia University who has developed a new method of treating the illness. He prescribes lithium carbonate, a salt commonly found in mineral springs. One of his most successful patients has been playwright and director Joshua Logan. Formerly a manic depressive who sprang from low to high moods in a matter of hours, Logan ("Annie Get Your Gun," "South Pacific," etc.) says now he is "never distracted by what used to make me either depressed or elated. Now I'm the same all the time." Logan is one of approximately 26 million Americans with severe mental illness who are forced to seek medical help during their lives, according to a study by Dr. Gerald Klerman, M.D., a professor of psychiatry at Harvard.

LEG ART
A new twist

"Who says these are women's legs?" That is restaurant owner Bob Rowan's standard answer when he is accused by feminists of being a sexist. Rowan decided on the shapely table legs after he and his two partners in the What This Country Needs restaurant in San Francisco put their heads together and came up with the legs as a gimmick. "Each leg is hand-carved. No two are alike," adds Rowan. In fact, the owners have taken great pains not to discriminate against anyone. The table legs come in all colors: black, white and yellow.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

CHECK OFF

For everything my wife has talents
Except to make a checkbook balance.
It's not addition or subtraction
That causes such dissatisfaction,
It's leaving out where money's gone to;
That is, in stubs, what checks were drawn to
And what amount—which fact not known
Makes balancing quite hard, I own.

So till the bank's next statement comes
And here's what chiefly rankles, sours:

Famous Scandinavian Design Scissors

- Cushion plastic handles with contour finger grip gives you more comfort and cutting freedom than you've ever experienced before.
- Stainless steel blades
- Cut paper in . . . patterns . . . fabrics with incredible ease.

Some time ago those inventive Scandinavians introduced an entirely new concept in scissors. It was a scissors with a special cushioned handle anatomically designed to fit your hand. The comfort was incredible. You could cut through the most intricate curve, cut all kinds of materials, cut free hand into all kinds of designs or slip the scissors along the table for an even straight line cut. People who were used to the old fashioned kind of scissors couldn't imagine a pair of scissors working so efficiently and so effortlessly as this new design. Seamstresses and anyone who needed them knew they had discovered a secret. But originally these scissors cost much, much more. In fact, even today you can find this design selling for $8.00 or more in fine stores. But now we've created this same design at a fantastically low price. "Shear Joy"! It's got the familiar orange, cushion soft, plastic handle, the stainless steel blades, weighs only 3 ounces, and they're 8¼" long. If you thought there was nothing glamorous about a pair of scissors then wait until you've tried these. At this new low price you can't afford to be without them. Order now. If they are not shear joy, simply return for full money back.
